LE BLANC GIRLS AID PRISONER

"We are both going to court to testify for Hattie. She is innocent. We want the whole truth known, and for that reason I have told of what occurred at the Glover home when I was there, and Lillian will tell what she knows."

To a friend to-day Miss Irene Le Blanc gave this as her reason for volunteering to testify at the Glover will hearing in East Cambridge, which resumed this afternoon, with her on the stand. She and Lillian went to save Hattie, who stands accused of the murder of Clarence F. Glover.

"I think my testimony will help her," testified Irene yesterday.

The testimony of the girl has been in the nature of an arraignment of Mrs. Lillian M. Glover. She has told of the alleged hatred of Mrs. Glover for her husband within a few days of the time he was killed. This feeling on the part of the wife was shown, according to the testimony, by numerous bitter notes written to him and by what Mrs. Glover told the girl.

Lillian to Take Stand.

When Irene finishes to-day, as it is expected she will, the other sister, Lillian, takes the stand. It is expected she will give testimony similar to Irene, and to help Hattie."

Sensations in the court room have attended the testimony of the little French girl. Sworn directly after Mrs. Glover had told of affectionate relations between herself and her husband, Irene Le Blanc has said that Mrs. Glover expressed the wish that her husband was out of the way, expressed satisfaction with his death, laughed over his dead body and wrote insulting notes and messages to him. When cross-examined she has told the same story, varying it only in detail.

The girl is still being cross-examined.

Mr. Elmore brought out the fact that the witness did not see Mrs. Glover place three different notes under Mr. Glover's plate, as she testified on direct examination, but the same note on three different occasions. She saw the note first on the Sunday preceding the murder, saw it again the following Wednesday and again on Friday.

On direct examination the witness had testified that the note she saw on Wednesday contained different words, according to Mrs. Glover's reading of it, from the one she saw on Sunday, and that the one she saw on Friday was different from either. Mr. Elmore pursued the inquiry to see how the apparent inconsistency would be explained.

"Yes."

"Wrote Him Not to Come."

"Did she read it to you again?"

"Yes."

"What did she say was in it?"

"She said she had written for him not to come to dinner, and he didn't come to dinner, and that if he came to supper she would do him no he wouldn't come again."

"On Friday did she read from the note the words: 'I don't want you, get out of my way, etc.?"

"Yes, and she said: 'Ever since I have been trying to send him from me, and I can't get him out of my way.'"

She was first questioned about her interest in the case, and replied that she had "a good interest."

"What is your interest then?"

"For Hattie."

"Has anybody told you you would help Hattie by coming here to testify?"

"No."

"Why do you say, then, that your coming here will help Hattie?"

"I think it will help her."

PINCHOT ON WAY TO MEET ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, March 22.—It was learned here to-day on the highest authority that Gifford Pinchot, deposed chief forester, has sailed to meet Colonel Roosevelt in response to a cablegram that he received from the latter.

It was learned that Colonel Roosevelt, late last week, cabled Pinchot to meet him in Naples. Mr. Pinchot left New York for that place last Saturday and is now upon the ocean.

PRESIDENT IN NEW YORK, HAS STRENUOUS DAY

NEW YORK, March 22.—President Taft arrived in New York from Providence at 7 a.m. on the private car Olympia. The car was attached to the Boston express of the New Haven road, and at the Grand Central station was surrounded by twenty policemen and a number of plain clothes men.

The President was sleeping soundly when the train arrived. He arose at 8:30 o'clock and received Robert C. Morris, president of the Republican Club, and A. B. Humphrey, secretary of the American Polo Conference League.

The President had a busy day. He was scheduled to appear at five places, two of them being banquets this evening. His first move to-day was to go to the home of his brother, Henry W. Taft. In front of the automobile as he left the Grand Central Station was a squad of bicycle policemen. Behind were several secret service men and plain clothes men, all in autos.

The President planned to meet Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican State Committee; Lloyd C. Griscom, president of the county committee, and other Republican leaders.

Lunches with Clews.

Luncheon with Henry Clews, the banker, at the latter's home at No. 27 West Fifty-first street, was one item on the program. Following this, at 3:30 p. m., the President planned to call upon the New York Press Club.

To-night he will attend and address the banquet of the American Peace and Arbitration League at the Hotel Astor, and is expected, as well, to make a brief call upon the Republican cohorts attending the dinner at the same hostelry to Congressman Herbert Parsons, formerly president of the Republican county committee, a half an hour after midnight, he will leave Jersey City for Washington.

The fact that the President is the guest at luncheon of Henry Clews, father-in-law of Herbert Parson, one of the chief Roosevelt Republicans in the House of Representatives, and regarded by some as an insurgent against Speaker Cannon, has created comment.

Chased by Bike Patrolman.

Mr. Taft and his brother were chased a dozen blocks by a bicycle patrolman, who thought the auto in which they were riding was exceeding the speed limit. He finally came up with the auto in which the President's plain clothes body guard were seated.

"Beat it," said a plain clothesman, "you're chasing President Taft."

"Great Scott!" said the bicycle cop, "what would Mayor Gaynor have said if I'd pinched Mr. Taft?"

HOLDING PLAN IS CONDEMNED BY LAWRENCE

Former Senator William B. Lawrence of Medford, one of the strongest opponents of the New Haven-Boston & Maine merger, appeared in the Legislature to-day to oppose the plan of Governor Draper to make the bonds of the Boston Railroad Holding Company, guaranteed by the New Haven, legal investment for savings banks in Massachusetts.

Mr. Lawrence told the Committee on Railroads and Banks and Banking, sitting jointly, that the New Haven's guarantee was very much less than it seemed to be.

"Do you gentlemen know that this means more the legalizing of bonds which are guaranteed by only seven miles of railroad in Massachusetts?" he asked. "The New Haven Railroad, you know, as a Massachusetts corporation, is only a seven-mile road."

High Finance.

In the course of his talk Lawrence accused Mellen and Byrnes of dabbling in high finance. He also said:

"A majority of the legislators try to do what is honest, but many of them are not qualified to cope with big questions of this sort. They come here simply because they get enough votes. For the past few years the Legislature has been controlled by fifteen or twenty men. You may not know it, but it's true."

Washburn of Worcester—Whom would you believe if you were on the committee and faced this paradox: President Mellen comes to us and says the New Haven is behind the legalizing move. Vice-President Byrnes of the same road says the New Haven has nothing to do with it. But it is a pet project of the Governor, and that if his road had the say it would have nothing to do with it."

Lawrence answered in two words:

"High finance."

700-MILE WIRELESS MESSAGE PICKED UP

NEWPORT, R. I., March 2.—Naval wireless operators at the torpedo station here to-day picked up wireless messages between the cruiser Birmingham, which sailed from Hampton Roads Sunday for the east coast of Africa, and the Pensacola station at Bruni Rock, Cape Cod, a distance of 700 miles.

FIRE HORSE INJURED.

One of the horses of the three-horse hitch, Engine 15 fire team, was badly hurt by colliding with a telegraph pole, when responding to an alarm for a small fire at No. 9 Loring street, South Boston, at noon to-day.

EARLY RETURNS SHOW DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE

Complete Reversal of Vote Indicated by Town Results in Fourteenth Congressional District Fight.

Basing their estimates on the first complete returns from towns in the Fourteenth Congressional district, the friends of Eugene N. Foss declared early this afternoon that he had swept the district and overwhelmingly beaten William R. Buchanan, the Republican machine candidate.

Complete returns from Scituate gave Foss 153 and Buchanan 82 votes. At the last Congressional election Lovering, Republican, received 214 and Packard, Democrat, 71 votes. This complete reversal of the vote from the Republican Democratic column indicated that there was a landslide for Foss.

FIRST RETURNS FROM NORWELL INDICATE LANDSLIDE.

The first returns were from Norwell, near Scituate, and gave Foss 123 votes and Buchanan 45. The same town gave the late Congressman Lovering (Republican) 147, and Packard (Democrat) 46.

This was a tremendous overturning of the political situation in this town and indicated that Foss, if the same situation prevailed all over the district, would get 73 per cent. of the total vote.

In the election of 1908 the total vote was 27,968. There was a falling off of the vote, apparently, of about 12 per cent. this year. This would make Foss win in the district, if the same percentage of gain continued, by between 17,000 and 18,000.

Foss followers in Brockton were jubilant this afternoon because of the outlook there. They declared two hours before the polls closed that Foss had swept every ward in the city and some of the wisest Republicans who had stood by the party candidate admitted that in their opinion Foss had won.

Splendid weather brought out a big early vote. It was apparent that the vigorous campaign work of Foss had told.

Mr. Foss is ill at his home in Jamaica Plain to-day. It is stated that he has a severe cold. A member of his family stated that nothing serious was feared, but that until Mr. Foss would be out in a few days. Strenuous work and speech-making during the past few days brought on Mr. Foss' illness. A report was spread to-day that Mr. Foss was threatened with pneumonia, but his physician says this is not the case.

Working Hard in Brockton.

William R. Buchanan, the Republican opponent of Mr. Foss, was hard at work in Brockton to-day dashing about the city in his automobile from one polling place to another and getting reports from Taunton and the Cape towns.

The heaviest vote polled in the district in recent years was in night early this afternoon. The early vote in Brockton and Taunton was tremendous.

In the last congressional fight about 7,000 votes were polled in Brockton. This year the figure will be nearer 8,000. Lovering carried Brockton two years ago by over 2,000 and the district by over 14,000. This Republican majority was cut down by half at the recent State election.

Foss Leaders Are Confident.

The Foss leaders, headed by Campaign Manager Edward Gilmore, at their headquarters in Brockton this afternoon were confident of Foss's election. They believe his majority will be between 2,000 and 2,500.

Mr. Buchanan believes that he will win. His managers admit his plurality will be smaller by more than half than Congressman Lovering secured.

Returns from the Cape to-day, where Foss has worked hard, fell of a heavy vote, with strong Foss sentiment. Foss paid more attention to the Cape than Buchanan did.

The polls closed at 4 o'clock in the cities and at 2 o'clock in the towns.

The election is a clean-cut battle over the principal political issues before the country to-day: Cannonism, the "high cost of living" and the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. It is the first popular test of these issues in the United States. Therefore, the result of the election is awaited with keen interest throughout the country, because of its great bearing on the tremendous political battle that is to be fought this Fall.

NINE MORE IN PITTSBURG ADMIT GRAFT

PITTSBURG, March 22.—Up to noon to-day nine more present and former members of councils had confessed to Judge Frazer that they were guilty of councilmanic graft. Judge Frazer, who is sitting as a committing magistrate, postponed sentence in every case. A postponement of sentence means an indefinite suspension, according to the ruling of the Court. Every man upon whom sentence is suspended must walk in the straight and narrow path."

To-day's developments were just as sensational as those of yesterday. The forty-one former and present members of councils against whom indictments were rendered last night, did not enter pleas to-day. They will be called for trial next Monday in Criminal Court.

There are reports that the District Attorney will gather from 80 to 100 men in his digest.

Confessed bribe receivers: Dr. C. L. Lang, W. G. Frederick, Thomas J. Stack, Richard Armstrong, W. H. Harvey, C. L. Woods, Fred Hering, L. H. Frederick, Harry Kaiser.

CANNON ALL SMILES WHEN HOUSE MEETS

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Speaker Cannon had a carnation in his buttonhole and was all smiles when he called the House to order.

Representative Sims of Tennessee rose to a question of personal privilege and denied that he had used language criticising the Speaker, attributed to him recently in a pun.

Representative Foss of Illinois resented the naval appropriation bill, which was completed to-day. It carries $129,937,902. This is $2,054,523 less than the estimates. The amount to be used for increase of the navy in construction and machinery, torpedo boats, submarines, colliers, armor, armaments and equipment is $32,379,840.

LONELY LONE SOUGHT FRIEND; ARRESTED

Joseph Lone, thirty, charged with robbery from Peter Rourke of Lowell, Charles Westard and Charles Haun, $40 in all, was held in $2,000 for the grand jury by Judge Murray in the Municipal Court to-day. Michael Cozzitolo was held in $4,000 in the same case last week. Lone went to the clerk of the Municipal Court yesterday to find out what became of Cozzitolo and was arrested by Special Officer O'Connell of the Hanover street station.

DEADLY SNAKE FIGHTS SHIP'S CREW ON OCEAN

Terror, with a big chattering T is written all over the faces of the Lascars who formed part of the crew of the steamer Indrani, just arrived from China, Japan, the Philippines and the Straits Settlements.

On board the Indrani is a monster python which was shipped with others of his snake tribe at Singapore for New York, where an enterprising and original showman hoped to exhibit them. The steamer was late in arriving, but that was not her only trouble.

Several days ago one of the largest of the reptiles, which is fully thirty feet long and a foot thick, got out of his box and wriggled his slimy way toward the forecastle.

Lascars in Terror.

The first inkling Captain Wilkes had of any trouble came with an unearthly chorus of yells of terror from the forecastle, followed by a crowd of Lascars, hair on end and teeth chattering loud enough to drown the noise of the engines.

All of the Lascars had to do was to point a quaking finger in the direction of the forecastle. The captain took in the situation in a glance. One of the pythons was loose.

Captain Wilkes knew there was no use depending on the Lascars for help. So he ordered Chief Officer Warren and Chief Engineer Downes to get together what white men they could and start in to fight the reptile.

It was a fearful task. For hours the men labored to trap the python, but, with almost human cunning, the brute evaded capture. Eight strong sailors and Brower got a stout plank and, acting on some one's right idea, tried to jam the plank between the reptile's fangs when his mouth was open.

Paralyzed With Drug.

They jammed the board all right, and held on. The next instant eight men and the plank yanked out of their hands by jerks with such quickness and force as to jolt their hands with ugly splinters.

Then an officer shouted "Get a rope and loosen his tail."

This was done and in a trice one swish of the reptile's tail sent eight men sprawling like ninepins.

Finally the snake retreated into an empty three sides of which are steel. Here he was trapped and both ends of the alley were closed with heavy planking.

On arrival at the Mystic docks to-day Captain Wilkes went ashore to get some morphine to put in the python's food. As soon as he is paralyzed by the drug it will be placed once more in the box.

PEACH GRAHAM OUT TO BEAT DOVES TO-DAY

By W. H. ROSS.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 22.—It looks as if there would be a lot of action in the game at Warren Park this afternoon between the Doves and the Peaches. Graham's men insist they can beat the regulars and that their first defeat was a fluke. The second game in the series will be played to-day and Manager Fred Lake is going to umpire again.

There is a deal on between Lake and Graham to swap some players. Lake has offered to trade Hester Brown, Billy Burke and Mel Wolfgang for Clif Curtis, Al Mattern and Chick Evans. The deal will probably go through, as Captain Graham thinks that after yesterday's work his team needs a shakeup.

There was no practice on the diamond this morning on account of wet grounds. The base line was very muddy and unfit for use. It will be dry enough to play on by the time the game is called.

The Doves threw the ball around on the dry section of the field. They got all the exercise they needed at that stunt. Everybody reported in good condition this morning with the exception of Leon Murrel, who is now feeling the effects of his first day's workout. He said it would not take him long to get into his best form.

STRANGE DEATH, POLICE SILENT

Mystery surrounds the death of a man giving the name of Charles A. Anthony in the City Hospital to-day. Medical Examiner Leary is investigating the case, but the police and City Hospital authorities refuse to throw any light upon Anthony's death. Anthony was arrested on March 13 by policemen of station 16. Drunkenness was the charge. He was locked up over night in Station 16, and the next morning conveyed to the city prison. Here he was taken to the hospital, as remarked to the City Hospital. He died last night.

The hospital authorities declare it is a medicolegal case.

Anthony gave his address as No. 60 Pearl street, but the police found that no such man was known there.

ESTRADA POISONED BY MADRIZ SPIES

BLUEFIELD, March 12.—Provisional President Estrada owes his life to an emetic administered yesterday afternoon. He had eaten poisoned food at a hospital, prepared by five Madriz spies working there in the guise of nurses. General Estrada visited the hospital during his stay and was given refreshments, eating heartily. Half an hour later he became violently ill. Five nurses who accompanied the army from the interior disappeared.

LABORITES CO-OPERATE WITH IRISH

LONDON, March 22.—The formation of a closer block by the Liberals, the Nationalists and the Laborites will be the direct outcome of the tabling of the resolution curbing the Lords' veto power by Premier Asquith, it was declared to-day by leaders of all three parties.

The position of the government was been greatly strengthened by this move, after several months of slackening.

The terms of the resolutions are such that it is believed the Irish and Laborites will agree to co-operate thoroughly with the government. The resolutions declare that the Lords should be legally prohibited from rejecting or amending money bills; that any bill passed three in two years by the Commons over the Lords' rejection shall become law automatically without royal assent; and the duration of Parliament is limited to five years. In the Lords the fight over the Rosebery resolutions will in all likelihood last until Easter.

Giolitti Is Asked to Form Italian Ministry.

ROME—The King to-day summoned into conference Signor Giolitti in an effort to induce him to change his mind and resume the premiership, following the resignation yesterday of Premier Sonnino. Giolitti was premier in 1900, 1903-05 and again in the 1906-09. It was reported authentically to-day that the next ministry will be compelled to adopt a strong anti-clerical stand. Giolitti, who was Sonnino's predecessor, owed his last downfall indirectly to his policy of ship subsidies, which caused the retirement of the Sonnino ministry, the premier fearing to bring the matter to a vote.

UNIONS QUIT TOMORROW IN LABOR'S WAR

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 22.—"By to-morrow morning, I am willing to predict, every union worker in Pennsylvania will be out in obedience to a general strike call."

E. E. Greenwalt, president of the State Federation of Labor, made this declaration when he arrived to-day to attend the meeting of the executive council of the federation, summoned to call the strike throughout Pennsylvania and intimate what is expected to be the greatest industrial conflict the country has ever experienced.

"There has been a lot of talk of peace, but there has been no peace and there seems to be no likelihood of a settlement of the Philadelphia troubles," Greenwalt said. "I was empowered by the State convention of the federation to call a State strike myself in an emergency, but I prefer to act with the other members of the executive council. Hence the meeting called for to-day. The strike is now a matter of a few hours."

It was declared to-day by labor leaders that reports received from various points in Pennsylvania assured the general obedience of the workers to call for a State-wide strike.

There is opposition in some quarters, however, and it was asserted to-day that the sentiment among the 150,000 or more organized anthracite miners, who have an agreement with the operators, was against the strike.

Baby Sarah Cohen, one year of age, toddling around the dining room of the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cohen, on the third story of the brick tenement house, No. 59 Auburn street, West End, upset a lighted lamp on a table. In an instant a blaze shot up, made uncontrollable by burning oil.

The father had gone to his work and the mother was sick, although able to be about the house. Sophie, aged fourteen, had presence of mind sufficient to grasp what had happened. She rushed down the stairways and to Policeman Morgan who was standing at a street corner near at hand.

"Our house is on fire," she screamed. The policeman started on the run, led by the excited little girl. Up the stairs and into the room, now filled with fire and smoke, the girl led the officer. He picked up baby Sarah, and Morris, six; while Annie, a thirteen-year-old sister, held to his coat sleeve. Down the stairs the policeman carried his little burdens to the street. The mother and Sophie followed.

When the engines came clanging up to the house the families living on the second and street floors rushed out in great scare, but the blaze was confined to the apartments of the Cohens. The damage is not heavy. Frank Brodie is the owner of the building.

WRECK DEATH LIST GROWS

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., March 22.—With forty-eight bodies recovered and identified, the death list in the Rock Island wreck, thirteen miles north of here, will be increased to-day. Several of the fifty injured are fatally hurt. All of the hospitals here are so crowded that halls have been turned into wards. The coroner and special committee of officials are investigating the most inflexed wreck in the history of Iowa. Chicago Great Western officials also participated in the investigation of the wreck, which occurred on the Chicago Western tracks.

A Chicago physician, Dr. John W. Dever is called the hero of the wreck. He organized a rescue corps. The physician was the first to make his way into the telescoped day coach, and he called for ever man physically able to do so to aid in the rescue work while he gave emergency treatment to those severely injured.

Miss Mae Hoffman, the most beautiful girl in Waterloo, Iowa, was among the killed. Several months ago she won the prize in a New York beauty contest.

At the morgue two little girls, who could say only their father's name when they identified their father, mother and two sisters. The girls had been thrown several feet, caught in a clay bank.

HOW THE GRIP LEAVES THE BLOOD

This Maine Woman's Experience Shows Why a Good Tonic Is Necessary After Influenza.

An attack of grip depletes the blood, reduces the vitality and leaves the system in a run-down condition that is sure to invite disease if not corrected.

It is a condition that calls emphatically for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the tonic especially adapted to meet this need. They enable the blood to absorb oxygen, the great sustainer of organic life, they tone up the nerves and give vigor, strength and health to the debilitated system.

Proof of the tonic power of the pills is shown in the cure of Mrs. Martha J. Jordan, of No. 95 Perham street, Farmington, Me.

"For four years," says Mrs. Jordan, "I suffered from the after-effects of the grip and was frequently confined to the bed for a week at a time. I was all run down, my stomach was weak and food distressed me. I had frequent vomiting spells and at night I would float till the last affected my heart. My kidneys were weak, liver sluggish and I was yellow as saffron. The least exertion made my heart flutter and I could hardly get my breath. I had sick headaches at least once a week which obliged me to give up all work. I was so sick I didn't want anyone to even speak to me and frequently I had dizzy spells when my head seemed to swell like a top and my sight was all blurred and my head ached as if it would burst.

"Reading about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills led me to try that medicine and I found relief almost from the first. A fair trial entirely cured me.

"My daughter was in poor health for two years from weakness common to girls of her age. She suffered intensely from pain. Dark spots that looked like bruises came out all over her body. I gave her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and the dark spots according disappeared and she was entirely cured. Now she is as well as can be."

Send today for a copy of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood." It is free.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

THREE ROOSEVELT CHEERS FOR OLD MASSACHUSETTS IN WELCOMING YANKEES

By A. J. LAMBERT.

Special Correspondent of the Boston American.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LUXOR, Egypt, March 22.—Theodore Roosevelt to-day explored every relic of ancient Thebes that has been uncovered in the desert wastes. Accompanied by Director of Antiquities Wiegall, who conducted the Roosevelt party through the Temple of Karnak by moonlight last night, the former President, Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel and Kermit toured the less famous ruins of ancient glory. One of the most interesting features on the day's program was Mr. Roosevelt's address to the missionaries.

Lewis M. Iddings, the United States Consul-General at Cairo, who came here to escort the Roosevelts to Cairo, accompanied them to-day. The hundred more Americans at Luxor battey the greatest interest in every detail of the Roosevelt party's movements. The arrangements for the departure of the party for Cairo to-morrow night were completed to-day.

The party reached this place from Shellal some 140 miles, and the trip was one continuous reception. It was the first real touch of the Roosevelt home-coming. Hundreds of Americans from every part of God's own creation, desiring their departure from Egypt, rushed to the railway stations to have the opportunity of shaking the colonel's hand and welcoming him back. In fact the trip assumed the complete proportion of a triumphal passage.

We departed quietly from Shellal early in the morning, the Roosevelts occupying one magnificent saloon and the correspondents occupying another. After a twenty minutes' ride the train reached Assouan.

All Heads Bared to Colonel.

The platform was crowded and, as though waiting for royalty, every man raised his hat as the colonel, bare-headed, alighted from the train.

Then began the hand-shaking, the colonel having an appropriate word or phrase for every one. Dr. McClellahan, head of the Assuit Mission established by Chicagoans introduced a number of the masters and graduates to the colonel who told them of the visit to Gordon College in Khartoum and the great pleasure it had afforded him. He was especially enthusiastic about the Coptic library and said:

"That work there was all done by students. That is fine for, by George, I believe the best way to help a man is to teach him to help himself."

White House Days Again.

On the platform were many Egyptian officers in fez-sook and khaki. The colonel said to one: "I had the pleasure of meeting you yesterday."

To another he said: "Weren't you in the Kosti fight and the Sudan campaign by George. How interesting.

"I myself am a soldier and take the greatest interest in collecting data as to having been the President, the greatest pride of my life, was in being the colonel of the Rough Riders and leading them through two engagements. When at Mongalla I met two officers who had been with Gordon and escaped up the Nile Valley."

Perhaps the colonel's hold on the American people was never better illustrated than when under the soft moonlight on the hotel verandas he received hundreds of Americans whom the tourist's boats had landed at Luxor. It was like the old days at the White House. Mr. Roosevelt was in evening dress and had a handshake and a word for each.

"Three Cheers for Massachusetts."

"We want you back in the White House," said a patriarch from Iowa.

"Our country needs you," said a man from California.

"I'm a sport myself and would like to have been with you in the jungle," said a Kansan.

Then passed men and women, typical Americans from all sections expressing the wish that he would return to politics and the promise that his re-election would be unanimous.

The throng formed in a crescent round the Colonel and the stentorian-voiced Call fortnight started.

"Three cheers for Roosevelt. What's the matter with Roosevelt? He's all right," was the resounding echo.

Colonel Roosevelt wore his broadest smile as he answered.

"I would like to give three cheers for every one of you, from California through Nevada, Idaho, Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa right up to Massachusetts."

Meanwhile Mrs. Roosevelt had been presented with lovely beads by an ancient Arab. Later the Colonel, Mrs. Roosevelt, Ethel and Kermit took advantage of the moonlight to drive to Karnak to see the grand architectural relics, the temple of Amnoon and the avenue of Sphinxes under the silver, softening light.

MAYOR'S MANAGER TO BE BATH HEAD

John J. McCarthy of Ward 22, who was assistant manager of Mayor Fitzgerald's last campaign, is slated for appointment as superintendent of the municipal bath department if the Mayor can secure the scalp of Superintendent Joseph O'Brien, which he has asked of the bath trustees. The bath trustees are not willing to depose O'Brien, even in the face of the Mayor's ultimatum that if they don't do so they will be deposed themselves. The Mayor has announced his intention of appointing William J. Welch water supply inspector and John B. Martin grant institutions commissioner. Both have previously served in the same positions.

TRAMP HAD $600; FORGOT HIS ROLL

NEW YORK, March 22.—Feeding and sheltering a tramp and finding he had $600, which he accidentally left behind was the experience of Eugene O'Reilly, of the Meeker Inn, Plainfield N. J., Sunday night. The tramp returned and asked if he had left a package. O'Reilly said he had. It contained six $100 bills.

BLACKMAIL CHARGE AGAINST BLIND MAN

Blackmail is the charge upon which Henry W. Stratton of No. 6 Wellington street, Dorchester, forty years old and blind, was held in default of $1,000 bail by Judge Lowell in the United States Circuit Court. The complaint was made by Edwin F. Atkins, a millionaire sugar planter, whose home is in Belmont. He charged that Stratton wrote him a letter advising him that he had certain information which he could sell to Dr. H. D. Bennett of this city, who intended using Mr. Atkins, and agreeing not to sell it to Dr. Atkins if paid $20,000.

JACOB A. RIIS TO SPEAK.

Jacob A. Riis is to give a lecture at Parker Memorial this evening on "The Making of Americans." This lecture was arranged under the auspices of Hale House, the social settlement named after Edward Everett Hale.

BLIND MAN ACCUSED OF BLACKMAIL

Even after he had been repeatedly told that he could not get $20,000 from Edwin F. Atkins, a Belmont millionaire, for evidence which he claimed would, if brought out in a court action, forever disgrace Mr. Atkins, Henry W. Stratton, a blind piano teacher of Dorchester, continued to send threatening letters, according to Mr. Atkins's counsel. Stratton is in jail awaiting bonds of $1,000 on the charge of attempted blackmail.

Mr. Atkins is now in Cuba, where he owns a number of sugar plantations. The move of Attorney Herbert Lee Harding in placing the evidence in the hands of the Federal Grand Jury was carried out, however, by his suggestion. Stratton was arraigned yesterday before Judge Lowell of the United States Circuit Court and after pleading not guilty his bail was fixed at $1,000, which he could not furnish, and he is now in the Charles Street Jail.

Contest Over Land.

"In 1893, when Mr. Atkins purchased a tract of land in Belmont," said Mr. Harding to-day, "three actions were brought by Dr. H. E. Bennett, who made various claims relating to the quality of the land which Mr. Atkins held. In each action Mr. Bennett lost his case in court. To all intents and purposes the matter was at an end.

"A few months ago, however, Mr. Atkins received letters stating that Stratton had evidence which, if given to Dr. Bennett, would enable the latter to reopen his case to advantage and that it would mean public disgrace to Mr. Atkins if this occurred. This letter was opened at the office of Mr. Atkins, who was then in Cuba, and later turned over to me. I investigated, and in a personal interview with Stratton took down all the evidence which he claimed to have. I wrote Mr. Atkins that I felt there was nothing in the material which Stratton called evidence which was worth a cent to us or anybody else, but I enclosed the evidence that Mr. Atkins might see what it was all about.

Took Case to Court.

"He called me at once to let the matter drop and not answer any blackmail letters. Stratton then wrote him a letter advising him that he had certain information which he could sell to Dr. H. D. Bennett of this city, who intended suing Mr. Atkins, and agreeing not to sell it to Dr. Atkins if paid $20,000.

"Mr. Atkins then placed the matter in the hands of Attorney Herbert Lee Harding, who, after investigating the case, placed the evidence in the hands of the Federal Grand Jury, which indicted Stratton."

BOY ELOPER ACCUSED OF $30,000 ROBBERY

NEW YORK, March 22.—A messenger boy, who is said to have recently robbed the Carnegie Trust Company of between $20,000 and $30,000 and then eloped to Los Angeles with a Jersey City girl, is being brought back to New York by detectives to-day. The girl is with him. The youth's name has not been revealed. Officials of the company would not deny to-day that the money had been stolen.

PIN-FED GIRL'S AUNT EXPLAINS ABOUT DIET

Bertha Schlossberg had a sharp appetite. She loved pickles, lemon drops and chow chow. But when those pallid months she looked for something sharper and found pins. She ate 'em and thrived on 'em for a year, and then she had to stop because they didn't agree with her. She got acute indigestion. Now Bertha is in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in a critical condition.

Bertha, who is pretty and lived with her aunt, Mrs. A. Rittenberg at No. 39 Middlesex street, really has not been eating the pins for a year. She began before her twentieth birthday and kept it up until her twenty-first, when she found she could not eat much of anything else. Her aunt insists on one thing, and that is Bertha did not take needles.

Her aunt is not worried by the girl's condition. She feels sure the pins will dissolve. "If she had eaten needles," she says, "that would have been a different matter. Needles don't dissolve."

Ate Pins to Please Company.

"And I did not make her eat the pins either," she said to an AMERICAN reporter to-day. "She did it herself. I don't think she ate as much as a peck of them. She didn't eat two three times a day. She only ate 'em when we had company.

"We all used to laugh when she did it and I see why they are fine stuff to put stomach. She used to feed them to me, looked like a fish hook and then would put them on her tongue like this . . . pretending to the work, but not putting any pin there, and she would pretend to swallow them. Then she always drank water to wash them down. Always take chaser after something sharp.)

Near Death from Laughter.

"Everybody used to laugh when I swallowed the pins. Once I nearly died laughing it was so funny. She used to make faces.

"It's funny she is sick now. She wasn't sick when she ate 'em. A year ago she got indigestion, and she stopped eating lots of things—pickles and limes and pie. And now she is sick. I don't see why.

"But it ain't true that I made her swallow the pins. She did not even do it with a straw. She just liked them, and we laughed, and she liked to see us laugh. That's all. If she told the nurse at the hospital that I made her eat pins, I'll up and make her eat her words."

OLD DIVORCE SUIT FILED BY BOSTON BELLE

Mrs. Henry Bainbridge Baker, a former Boston society beauty and wife of a wealthy New York contractor, has filed one of the most unusual divorce libels on record.

Mrs. Baker is with relatives in this city today. She came here shortly after her representatives had served the papers in the suit on her husband at his beautifully furnished home, No. 118 West Fiftieth street, New York.

"My husband expatriated me," said Mrs. Baker today. "He told me that he would support me if I lived away from him on the other side of the world, but that if I remained in the same country with him I could go penniless. He forced me, therefore, rather than of starving to give up the land of my birth and live in Europe."

The Bakers were married in 1898 in this city, where their only son, now a boy of twelve, was born. They then moved to Glen Ridge, N. J., where in 1900, their troubles began. Late in that year, after many disagreements, Mrs. Baker's attorneys say, the husband closed up their suburban home and refused to pay for the latter's house to live.

Baker said today, after reading his wife's affidavit:

"There is nothing I can say in reply except that I am not going to enter any defense. There isn't any scandal about it on either side. It's merely a case where two people were unhappy and couldn't get along together.

"Therefore I sent Mrs. Baker abroad to live. She will no doubt obtain her divorce without any trouble, and that will settle the matter. Some suitable arrangement will be reached about the boy. I am allowing Mrs. Baker to bring the divorce action against me because I think that—that any man—should take the worst end of it in a matter where a woman is concerned."

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

LIQUOR DEALERS WARNED BY BOARD

The Licensing Board has sent out a notice to all liquor license holders calling their attention to the provision of their permits which forbids the sale of liquor to minors and to persons who have been known to be intoxicated within six months. The circular is the direct result of the assassination of the license of Maurice Fitzgerald & Co. on Washington street, on February 12, for the sale of liquor to a minor. The circular urges the liquor holders to make a special effort to prevent boys from loitering about their premises, especially newsboys and messenger boys.

A Want Advt. if often the road to fortune.

NEW CHARGES OF FORGERY IN RUSSELL CASE

Additional charges of forgery were made at the Russell hearing today, when Dr. Albert H. Hamilton, handwriting expert for Daniel Blake Russell, the claimant, declared that the second batch of Russell letters had never been through the United States mails in the regular line of business.

The letters referred to were offered in evidence to prove that the claimant is an impostor. The charge that they are forgeries was made by Dr. Hamilton during his cross-examination today by Attorney Proctor for William C. Russell. He declared that the cancellation stamps on these letters are bogus.

Trick at the Postoffice.

"These letters never went through the mails in the regular line of business," said Dr. Hamilton. "It is possible and even probable that they were planted in the postoffice so that the Russell family could call there and get them and swear that they received them at the postoffice."

Dr. Hamilton again charged that a number of the exhibits which are those of the Russell letters were written by Detective Billy Fitzpatrick in the employ of William C. Russell.

"In the United States postage stamps on this letter, but I show you genuine," added Attorney Proctor.

Attorneys in a Wrangle.

Attorney Simpson interrupted at this point and said, "Don't you think that those are foolish questions to ask?"

"No," replied Mr. Proctor. "They are very vital. He should be able to answer all of these questions just as he has been able to answer all the others."

"Bring in the men who did the writing," said Mr. Simpson in reply. "Then we will see."

"Your men, if any, did it," shouted Mr. Proctor. This closed that incident.

Attorney William Odlin, who yesterday filed an appearance for the second claimant, was present in court again today. During a short intermission he and Judge Lawton held a whispered conversation.

WOMAN THREATENS CUSTOMS OFFICIAL

NEW YORK, March 22.—Mrs. Cornelia L. Woolman, a handsome and wealthy woman of Helena, Mont., who claims to be a friend of United States Senator Carter, was held in $500 by United States Commissioner Hoss on a charge of attempted smuggling. Mrs. Woolman arrived on the North German Lloyd liner George Washington with seven pieces of baggage. The inspector who looked over her trunks found in one of them several new gowns, unmistakably Parisian, and questioned her regarding them. "How dare you talk to me like that?" blazed Mrs. Woolman. "I am influential friend and I'll make you suffer for this."

BOSTON'S FORTY "LIVE IMMORTALS" CONTEST STIRS WIDE INTEREST

HAVE you sent in your list of forty "live ones" in the AMERICAN'S contest?

If not, there is plenty of time to do so now.

Thousands of men and women have replied and are replying to the AMERICAN'S request that they select a list of forty live men who are destined to live in Boston's history.

The request was for live ones—men who are living and doing now. The BOSTON AMERICAN offers prizes, consisting of a first prize of $10, a second prize of $5 and five prizes of $1 each for the best lists of forty.

Can you name Boston's FORTY IMMORTALS?

They must be alive—that is the first condition of the contest. A minor condition is that you write on one side of the paper and as far as possible get the full names of your heroes.

The State Street Trust Company of this city has issued a very handsome brochure containing a list of Forty Immortals—men of the past whose achievements would entitle them to places in Boston's Hall of Fame—if Boston happened to have such a temple. The editors of the AMERICAN are now asked to submit the names of men now living or Metropolitan Boston whose achievements entitle them to places in a Hall of Fame that may or may not be built some time. Here is the list given:

FIREMEN RESCUE MOTHER AND CHILD

In the nick of time to save their lives was the rescue of a woman and child by firemen from a burning East Boston tenement at No. 91 Hulbert street. The fire was caused by the upsetting of a lamp in the rooms of Benjamin Rebortiz. In a few minutes the flames were in command. The several occupants of the house had rushed out to give the alarm when it was discovered that Mrs. Emil Orlando and child were still in the tenement in the third floor in the smoke. The firemen rushed up the stairs and groping their way about the tenement found the nearly-suffocated pair and took them out.

GEORGE C. LEE DEAD ON 80TH ANNIVERSARY

George C. Lee of Lee, Higginson & Co., for half a century a leader in banking and financial circles of Boston, is dead at his home, No. 204 Beacon street. Death was sudden and occurred on the eightieth anniversary of his birth.

Prominent men the country over will mourn the death of the distinguished banker, for his acquaintance was not only country wide, but world-wide. Former President Roosevelt will be one of the most distinguished mourners, for the first wife, Alice Lee, was the daughter of Mr. Lee. Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth is a granddaughter of Mr. Lee.

Since 1865, when he joined the firm, Mr. Lee had been one of the strongest and most progressive, although conservative business men in this city. He was for years a strong factor in many of the most important financial enterprises which made for the good not only of New England, but of the country at large. Mr. and Mrs. Lee observed their golden wedding anniversary on December 6, 1907, and the bucher they was in the best of health. For the past month, however, he has been ailing, and age was the only cause of the decline.

The business son, George C. Lee, Jr., who has been taking his father's place in the firm for some time. Three daughters also survive him, Mrs. Reginald Fitz, now in Europe; Mrs. S. H. Fessenden and Mrs. George S. Mumford.

MEAT PRICES JUMPING SINCE THE BOYCOTT

The price of meat is still soaring, with no hope that a drop will ever come. Beefsteak and lamb are from one to three cents a pound higher this week than last.

The wholesalers admit that there is a steady rise in prices, but are unwilling to give a reason.

Swift & Co.'s local representatives stated to-day:

"There has been no sudden rise in the price of meats. The rise has been gradual and steady, just as it has been for the past few weeks. For instance, two weeks ago the average price of all meats sold by us was 10.32 cents. Last week it was 10.60 cents. It has gone up some what since."

What these figures mean to the consumer of meat is best shown by the fact that less than two years ago the figure for the average was somewhere about eight, and at the time of the boycott agitation it was below nine. There has been an increase of about 31 per cent in cost since the boycott started, and of 20 per cent at least in all the good cuts.

SAW MILL BURNS.

WESTFIELD, Me., March 22.—Stanner O. Hancock's saw mill at Spar's Corner is completely burned this morning. The cause is unknown. It is supposed to have caught around the boiler.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA, HEARTBURN AND OTHER STOMACH MISERY GOES.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you, just a little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach: if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, causing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.

Read What One Boston Woman Discovered

Confidence of the public in any Mercantile Establishment is the vital factor in the success of that establishment. Last week in order to test the confidence of the New England public in Henry Siegel Co.'s store we published all of our advertisements for Monday's business without a single price or item. We told the public they would find a value-giving surprise awaiting them in every section of the store that would forever linger in their memories—a pleasant recollection of March 14th, 1910. Weather and other conditions being about equal, we enjoyed a substantial increase in our business over the corresponding Monday of 1909. One Boston woman found her surprise in a beautiful Silk Dress Pattern at 69 cents a yard, after having seen the same thing in a nearby store for $1.00 a yard. This was the experience of thousands. With such confidence at the helm of this great store how can we fail to continue to grow until we become the leading store of the entire New England States.

DOVES ON HUSTLE IN GETTING READY FOR REGULAR GAMES

RED SOX HAVE FINE CATCHER IN BRADLEY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HOT SPRINGS, March 22—At present the other fellows seem to be getting the best of the breaks, but they are hitting harder and taking advantage of all our errors. The last game might have been closer, had not Friend and Wagner bested the ball on easy chances. Then Pape grew wild, hitting one man and passing another. A single followed; then two strike outs and another single, all of which netted five runs for the Reds—enough to win the game.

Heinie Wagner is far from his form, both at bat and in the field. When he is right nightly few runs are charged up to him, but with him going badly there is a big hole in the infield. Lest the defeats should worry the Boston fans, it can be said that Manager Donovan is perfectly satisfied with the way things are going. He is looking for practice and is not bothered by the loss of a game or two. Griffith has given it out that the Boston will not win another pennant, so the chances are he will see his mistake before many days.

Donovan is giving his young pitchers a chance. He knows what they can do, innings and Wood can do when they are right. He knows also that Collins will not be in his stride for some time to come, as he is a late pitcher and takes plenty of time to round into shape.

No Spit Ball for Steele.

Elmer Steele is trying to work away from the spit ball, which heretofore has been his main stock in trade. But many pitchers are discarding the "spitter" and Elmer thinks he can do as too, and still retain his effectiveness.

Hugh Bradley, the Worcester boy, is delighted that Manager Donovan will give him a chance as a catcher. Patsy intends to give him all the work he can stand behind the bat. Bradley caught for the Worcesters for nearly a month last season and ought to make good.

The Red Sox are not any too strong in backstop. Carrigan is a grand catcher when right, but he is not getting into condition. Madden is going along nicely, but he thinks there are things in the close-line department that he has to learn yet. Pat Bonner is in rather bad shape. He is limping badly and his arm is weak. He has not been allowed to catch any of the games thus far, and under the circumstances it will be some time before he will be able to get into form. Cady, Pat has been keeping rather late hours, and has shown a disposition to neglect his training. This, of course, does the team no good, but Pat has promised to attend strictly to business in the future. With Bonner temporarily out of the game Cady has gun over weight, the club was really short of catchers, so Donovan decided to put Bradley in. Hugh Bradley was who Brad really stood no chance of getting into a regular game by batting hampered to Jake Stahl. Jim Myers would like the second string, so he has already given a fine demonstrated his superiority over Bradley as a fly catcher.

Bradley to Be a Catcher.

The chances are that if the Boston club tried to place Bradley in the minors to further develop him the other American League clubs would refuse to waive, as he has quite a reputation as a batter, and besides that the other clubs are watching for the Red Sox recruits to get away before any of them get away from them. Good days and Delaney recently. Although he should have known that he was equal to the best man in the world in the ring, he didn't like to get his whole future to the test until he was satisfied that he was his opponent's master. So he went to talking fight with him and simply went after him and the two men finally articles were signed I would tell Jeffries whom and where to go and he would get that and was all there was to it.

"After Jeffries had won a couple of fights and had some money to his pocket he didn't see the need of fighting. He figured that he had to go through with a deal, usually got down to business and trained hard. In only one match did Jeff refuse to live up to the articles I signed. That was the proposed mill with Bill Squires when the late Australian brat came to this country. I agreed to put Jeff against the foreigner and a $20,000 purse was to be made up. Jeffries was to get $5,000 as training expenses, and the whole thing looked pretty soft. When the champion refused to live up to the articles I signed for Squires I washed my hands of him for good and all."

Delaney is naturally not on any too friendly terms with Jeffries, but he does not let this fact influence him when telling the good points of the man who is soon to try to recapture the world's heavyweight title from Jack Johnson. Here is the way the veteran—and no man knows Jeffries better—sizes up the fighter:

"When I first met Jeffries he was little more than a very big overgrown boy. He was and is to-day a wonderful specimen of manhood. He has always been a hard lot in the years he has been out of the ring, but in spite of that I am not willing to say that there is a man alive who can lick him in a championship argument. I certainly believe that he cannot be whipped by any man that he ought to be, a few years ago. In a rough and tumble fight. His ring generalship, hitting power and stamina make him invincible at this sort of battling.

"I was sorry to have to break with Jeffries after our former partnership, but when he repudiated me as he did I was through with him. The split was the hardest thing Delaney had to teach Jeffries was to abandon some of his outlandish ideas about fighting. Jeffries, unless, seemed never to like taking a chance, and this showed to his disadvantage in his fight with Harry Baker in San Francisco. Through lack of aggressiveness on Jeffries's part Baker lasted nine rounds, which was about nine rounds longer than there is any reason for his lasting on his feet. Jeffries carefully covered up, and his time and simply wore his man down. When he was so far gone that there was absolutely no danger in his punches he threw away and over the knock out punch.

CHAPTER VII.

While Jeffries was fighting his way to the top of the pugilistic ladder he had but one serious obstacle to contend with. That was the opposition of his family. Both his father and mother tried their best to get him to forsake the ring and take up preaching. News of Jim's victories was not received with joy by the old folks. Instead they joined in prayer asking that the son be led to give up the thing. The following letter was printed the day after the news of Jeffries's victory over Tom Sharkey in New York reached Los Angeles:

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 5, 1899.

There were family prayers to-day in the household of the affirmer Jeffries. Mr. Jeffries, father of the champion pugilist-to-be, is away on one of his customary soul-saving expeditions, and Mrs. Jeffries presided at the family gathering.

Kennedy she prayed that Jim's ambitions and inclinations be turned from the prize ring and directed to the pulpit. She beseeched that he be led to follow in the footsteps of his father, and, instead of fighting, to go from place to place preaching the doctrine of Christianity.

Mrs. Jeffries was not elated by the news of Jim's victory. The correspondent drove out to the little home on the Arroyo Seco, nine miles from here. Perhaps might be tell the old lady that Jim had defeated the sailor. Every one was asleep, and the old lady reluctantly put her head out of her bedroom window and listened to an account of the last round, which was read to her by the light of matches.

With no trace of emotion Mrs. Jeffries said:

Of course I am glad Jim won. I am glad in a way that he succeeded in the life he has chosen. Every mother is proud of her children, and if Jim is to be a fighter I want him to be the best. I suppose he will keep on fighting until—well, until he meets a better man and is whipped.

Mrs. Jeffries would not permit any of the children to show emotion over the victory of their big brother, but the youngest sister of the champion, a very handsome girl of seventeen, smiled continually. It was impossible for her to repress her joy over her brother's triumph.

Mrs. Jeffries, a married sister of the champion, made no effort to conceal her satisfaction. Last night she and her friends built a big bonfire in honor of Jim's triumph.

LAKE KEEPS PLAYERS GOING AT GINGER HEAT

By W. H. ROSS.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 22—Captain Graham of the Georgia Peaches is very much dissatisfied with the showing made by his team against the Doves and called a meeting of his players this morning just before the Boston bunch left for the ball park. He told his men he expected to beat Manager Fred Lake's regulars.

"I need a new second baseman, a new shortstop and I'd hate to express myself any further," said Graham.

His men apparently have adopted the motion that they are all right, but they couldn't go so far as that to any resolution concerning the captain.

Both the Doves and the Peaches claim that Fred Lake gave them the worst of it as an umpire. When they consolidated with him after the game Lake read the riot act.

"I may have handed you a few bad ones but I've got to get organized. I wanted to find out how hard you'd kick," said Lake, and out all right. He had little "Bert" Morgan talking to himself all the way round the sacks. The boys showed so much interest in that Yamigan game that anybody not versed in the signs could see that they thought it was a post season contest for world honors.

Was Quick Game.

It was a game out of the ordinary for the time in which it was played. It went seven full innings in forty minutes. Lake kept everybody hustling and there was nothing to it but get singer. It was the first real baseball work Leon Martel has done this year. He had not gotten so far hence as to put on a uniform, and as a result he fattened when the fracas was over. He was going to be as sore to-day as anything that had ever been in the form of this of afflictions. As might have been expected, he was not long in the game, but at the bat he smote the ball with one safe clout.

The only one best bat of the game was contributed by Peaches Graham, who had a single and a home run to his credit for three socks. He smashed the ball to right field and over the fence Rodgers and Bert Hall made a great try and got a mitt on the ball, but it managed to get out of the way of the gloved Becker of the home of star of the season with a loop in earth.

The best stop of the game was by Rodgers' hill. Somer made a plunge and picked up with his right hand a driver over third base, which was traveling at a fast clip. It left sparks in its wake, but Bill was so anxious to get the ball across, he threw before he got his balance, and the sphere got by Dr. Martel. It is a question where the error should go. Conroy played his hard luck all over the course. Everything went down in the air. He traveled at the rate of a mile a minute. One high drive tore his glove off, and another and a low one flew around like a crazy rannen ball until it lost all its steam on its way to his skin.

Some of the outfielders had much to do, but Al Matters out in left pasture rolled up by nicked one safe single. Con while he travelled like a Derby winner in the stretch, and Bert Hall, Somer, Graham and Dave Sloan was there with the goods on every play in which he participated.

The work of the Regulars was pretty fair, considering they have only had four days' training, and this was the first real game. Jimmy Lake was capable of the low and recussed a critical eye on everything thrown his screen. Cliff Curtis, forrest More, Buster Brown, Tom Turkey, Billy Hinkle and Mel Wolfgang all had a try in the box.

There was nobody in the box office and nobody on the gate yesterday, and several hundred Augusta fans were guests at the ball park. Bungy the colored man who is the superintendent of the baseball grounds, and therefore the possessor of no reserved place in his society circle, began at once to get the turnstile which is to be turned Saturday next for the game with Ty Cobb's Augusta team.

Bungy in the Game.

It was a day full of incident for Bungy. His long-legged wife, Lady Maud, stuck an inquiring nose into a pot mostly full of green paint and then tried to dispose of unexpressed opinions on the subject.

But Joe Gans at his best never had anything on Lady Maud when it comes to side stepping. Not a lick reached her. In batting practice a foul bounced through the open door of the Bungy homestead and the lady of the household came forth and shouted "Hyar, you man; stop dat foolishness."

After the game was over it began to rain, and the fact that it was not forecasted by any oracle observed on the barometer which stands outside the office on the corner nearest to the hotel. Every eye and more Manager Lake and President Dovey go out and look it over. Today they are not exactly in love with the prognostications of the good lobsterfaced Manager Fred narrows last evening when he tried to show the weather boy by pointing to the high water mark on the eternal rising line that there was no flood. Then there was three feet of water before they got to it, and no pale at all in from the street in skiffs.

"Spring, the land of sweet flowers, sah," said the Augusta man dubiously.

"Not when the fracas was over here was going to be as sore to-day as anything that had ever been in the form of this of afflictions. As might have been expected, he was not long in the game, but at the bat he smote the ball with one safe clout.

CHAPTER VI.

Billy Delaney, "champion maker," was the first man to see the great possibilities in Jim Jeffries. Delaney met the big fellow when the latter was helping Billy Gallagher train at Colma for his fight with Mysterious Billy Smith. Delaney's trained saw there was championship material in Jeff and in "grabbed" him. Shortly after Delaney and Jeffries's big nature to a contract he took him to Carson City, and while there arranged a match with Van Buskirk.

This bout took place in San Francisco in April, 1897, and was won by Jeffries in two rounds.

From there were as the slightest use in trying to get Jeff to agree to fight. In those days, said Delaney recently, "Although he should have known that he was equal to the best man in the world in the ring, he didn't like to get his whole future to the test until he was satisfied that he was his opponent's master. So he went to talking fight with him and simply went after him and the two men finally articles were signed I would tell Jeffries whom and where to go and he would get that and was all there was to it.

STATE BENEFITS FROM BIG AUTO REGISTRATION

By J. C. KERRISON.

Under the present registration and licensing law the Massachusetts Highway Commission will receive a most handsome amount of money from the motorists. With less than three of the twelve months of the calendar year expired the Commission has already received almost as much money from fees as it did the entire twelve months of last year. The receipts to date amount to $170,000 in round numbers, and there are yet hundreds to be heard from. Already something like 14,000 cars and motor cycles have been registered, and fully twice more will come before the Commission for consideration before the close of next Fall arrives. This will prove the greatest season in the history of the industry, and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts reaps its share of the profits therefrom.

On Monday, March 14, the Ford Motor Company shipped 150 cars from its High land Park plant. This is the largest single day's shipment ever made by the Ford Motor Company, and probably the largest one day output ever reached by any manufacturer.

It is the intention to continue this rate of production, and the only thing that can prevent it is the difficulty to secure sufficient freight cars. If the railroads could supply cars enough, the daily output of the Ford Factory would average 200 automobiles.

"Now that we are housed in our big plant at Highland Park, we can easily build 250 to 300 cars every day in the year" is the way Mr. Ford expresses it.

That this one day's shipment is not the result of a spurious or sudden burst of enthusiasm is evidenced by the orders booked the last few days. On the 11th, 242 orders were received by mail and telegram, on the 12th, 238 and on the 14th, 176.

George J. Dunbam, president of the Royal Tourist Car Company, is outspoken in his condemnation of the smoke nuisance in connection with the running of automobiles. He attributes it to the carelessness of the drivers as well as to the faulty motor construction and suggests that the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers should wield its influence in mitigating the evil before drastic legislative action is taken.

"All the streets of our big cities," he said, "are reeking with foul exhaust smoke odors at a result of motorists' wilful or ignorance on the part of many drivers of automobiles on the one hand, and faulty designed motor construction on the other. There is little if any excuse for this smoke nuisance—the garage is the place to thorn by the nose bearings and the carburetor for purposes—and the public should not be made to suffer on this account."

CATCHER SULLIVAN MUCH IMPROVED

LOS ANGELES, March 22.—Catcher Billy Sullivan is much better today. His wife and the doctors believe the crisis is past and that both his life and his leg will be saved. Sullivan will remain in the hospital until able to travel and then he will go to Santa Barbara, where his mother lives, to recuperate.

MILTON ACAD. TEAM STRONG THIS YEAR

The Milton Academy ball team this year will be some class, and championship rumors are already in the wind.

The prospects for the baseball team, when looked at so early as this, are always rather uncertain. It is hard to tell how much the old men will have improved and how the new material will turn out. This year there is left Captain J. Hoadly, left field; E. Handy, catcher; Talbot, first base; W. Faulkner, shortstop; Phillips, second base, and Devereux, third base. All of these men have had considerable experience against good pitchers and good teams and ought to do good work this year. Not all of them, probably, will play the same positions as last year. E. Handy and Faulkner are trying for pitcher, and Watson, pitcher, is filling Handy's position behind the bat. Devereux is being tried out at the second and Phillips at third, the other positions remaining the same.

Of the new material, C. C. Felton and Morris are trying for pitcher. The latter pitched a good game on the second team last year and has good curves. Kolb and Vogel are available.

Manager Handy has arranged a hard schedule and if there be sufficient pitchers can be developed, it ought to be carried through successfully. Last year, as it was two years ago, the big game, and plays at Milton on May 28. The schedule is as follows:

April 12—Open.
April 16—Browne & Nichols.
April 20—Roxbury Latin.
April 23—A Harvard scrub team.
April 27—Stoney School.
April 30—Noble & Greenough's.
May 7—Groton.
May 11—Harvard Second Team.
May 14—St. George's School.
May 17—Volkmann School.
May 21—Middlesex.
May 25—Concord High School.
May 28—Pomfret.

WILL BET JEFF WON'T FIGHT

CHICAGO, March 22.—John Arthur Johnson, champion, is not worrying over any thoughts that he may lose his crown in a coming combat with James J. Jeffries.

Nor is John Arthur worrying much over the outcome of a trial now on in the city of New York this week on a charge of beating up one Norman Fisher.

But there is some trouble on the mind of the black champion, and he is in search of the system who will go again and with some emphasis repeated his offer to bet $1,000, and possibly more, that James J. Jeffries does not appear in the ring with Jack Johnson on July 4 next.

And it was in the spirit of braggadocio that Johnson offered to bet $1,000 on the outcome of a meeting. He was sanny exhibiting his own feelings in the matter, and these same feelings are shared by a multitude of fight fans, who are sure that there will be no championship battle between the boilermaker and the black tarbaby.

If do not intend any reflection on Mr. Jeffries when I say I believe he will never more box," explained Jack. "It would seem like he is afraid. We all know that he has been a great fighter, but he is not the Jeffries that once fought so well.

"I have heard from men who have known him well and who have been close to him for several months. I haven't heard a single sincere person be signed articles in New York. He was beat back from a good rest in Reno, and no doubt felt that he could come back to something like his old form.

"I now believe he begins to realize more and more every day that he is no longer a man fit to engage in a championship contest."

PADDY LAVIN WINS BOUT WITH NELSON

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 22.—Paddy Lavin of this city received the decision over Battling Jack Nelson of Brooklyn, Referee McBride stopping the contest in the ninth round and deciding in the local boy's favor. His chances were changed at the action of the referee. Nelson caught Lavin with a wild swing in the seventh and toppled him cleanly, Lavin taking the count of eight. Lavin outpointed Nelson.

LAURIE WINS FIRST MATCH.

At the opening game of the three-cushion carom championship at the Imperial billiard room last night, Laurie defeated Mason by the score of 50 to 43. Jones and Campbell play to-night.

STRAIGHT DOPE

FOR SPORT FANS

AFTER DEEP MEDITATION I HAVE concluded not to hand you out any advance dope on the winners of the bouts at the Armory to-night. My selections were so rotten last week that I'm afraid some misguided persons might be moved to bounce something heavy off my beam if I gave them been steers two weeks in succession. (Only Monday please take notice). Besides this they look a lot harder to pick. It is the classiest bunch of bouts Boston has seen in recent years. I can really too young to remember very far back, but they shape up on paper as the best in my time.

BOXING CONTESTS AT THE AMERICAN Mode that are a little bit out of the ordinary, but they have one there this week which is all to the good. Johnny Mooney, matchmaker of the Army Club, disguised himself in a set of grey whiskers (the same he wore the other night at Manchester) and took a look. Then he made a valiant effort to sign up the winner for one of the star bouts at the Triple A, but there was nothing doing with Jack Johnson. Mooney took a look of Mooney's whiskers and refused to negotiate with him. He is going to try again to-day with other disguises and get on his mush and hopes for better results.

WELL THOSE BASEBALLERS WHO will be cavorting on the local lots in less than a month have been down South long enough for Dan Howe here in Boston to get a line on who the live ones are and also who are in the deadwood class. However, there aren't many with either team in the latter squad. Fred Lake was tipped off as having a hard job getting his young bones into any kind of shape, but he is shipping them into line mighty nicely. Both Boston teams are made up of young, coming players, none of the old timers who are going back have places with either organization.

NOW THAT TOMMY RYAN HAS announced that he will have charge of preparing Champion Jack Johnson for his bout with Jeffries, it must be taken that one old friend Butcher Howe of Cambridge has declined the job. Howe is the inventor of the correspondence system of training as well as the always first one to bet big and sometime ago was approached by Johnson's manager to take charge of the black fighter's training camp. Men who are betting on Jeffries will be disappointed as they felt sure that with Howe on the job in Johnson's camp, they would get a run for their money.

THERE IS A LETTER IN THIS OFFICE for Albert Lewis, the ball player who asked me a few days ago to help him get located on some team. Either like to and get it, or send me your address. Albert, and do it quickly, please.

WILLIAM GREEN, CONCORD, N. H.—The matter of sex does not enter into one of the word you write about. However, I wouldn't use it if I were you. I know a lot of good fighters who don't like the word, and you might butt into some husky chap who would object.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Dear Sir—A bets B that Langford knocks out Jeffries inside of fifteen rounds. Who wins? Pushing you in advance.
Providence. S. E. G.
It is a mystery to me why you ask that question like this. Don't you read the papers? A wins. Flynn was knocked out, so badly out that he doesn't know yet exactly what happened to him.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Dear Sir—Kindly send me a bet. A bets that Jeffries can't knock out Jack Johnson. B says he can. Also add to or over basis on Sharkey. One of your readers.
Inasmuch as Johnson and Corbett never boxed each other, it's pretty hard to settle your bet. My opinion is that Corbett was the cleverer of the two. Jeff won from Sharkey twice but did not knock him out.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
If little Stanley Ketchel could stay twice rounds with Jack Johnson and come down in one of those bouts do you figure that Jeffries will have a cinch? Or will he need Jeffries? I do not see how Johnson can possibly stay four rounds with Jeffries at the top of his speed. Why, he can't straight clip column along here. Let all the cranks who are so worried what grounds you have for thinking Johnson will stay and make Jeffries go the limit, drop around and inquire of Tommy Ryan, who trains Johnson. By the way, A says there are no second bouts. Can you get them? Can this be true of such a vast city? Thanking you in advance I remain, yours truly,
Calais, Me. J. C.
Did you ever hear of a boxer "training" another? Believe me that is what Johnson did with Ketchel. He could have put him out much sooner than he did. Also did you ever know of a champion "coming back?" I never did. They don't. I have given my reasons for believing Johnson will win, so often that most of the people will read this column know them by heart, and are tired of them. I would like to think Jeff can win, but I can't see it that way. A is wrong; there are negroes in London.

Dear Sir—Please state that the Trojans of Roxbury claim the system to accommodate all challengers. Now we have beaten that team twice last season, so I don't see where they get off at. Dear Sir—I have under my wing a young boy who is a fine boxer. He has had a few bouts in Providence and Pawtucket. He would like to get on with some of the boys around Boston. He is a lightweight, 135 pounds. Hoping to see this in your Straight Dope I remain, yours truly,

LARRY TEMPLE GETS AWARD

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 22.—Charley White, the Chicago featherweight, made every round a winning one, easily outpunching Tommy Dixon of New York in the star go at the Phoenix A. C. Dixon stripped in poor condition.

Larry Temple, the old-time negro fighter, was given the decision in eight rounds over Eugene Sims of Sycamore, Ill.

The seating capacity of the arena was taxed to accommodate the crowd.

ITALIAN CYCLONE TO MEET GODFREY

Lovers of wrestling will get a rare treat tomorrow night at the Columbia Theatre when Manager Jim Hanlon has arranged a well-known Italian, Cyclone Leo Pardello with George Godfrey, the California heavyweight champion, as his opponent on the mat. Pardello is coming with persons of the Columbia, while Godfrey is an unknown quantity, never having appeared in this city before. He comes from the Coast with a splendid record and promises to put out his work for Tuesday night's bout promise to be the most interesting of the season at this house.

BOXING BOUTS HELD UP IN BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, March 22.—The police stopped the bouts scheduled to take place at the Bedford A. C. of Brooklyn and thereby disappointed 700 sports. Captain O'Connor stationed his men around the clubhouse and warned the managers that if an attempt was made to pull off the fights all hands would be arrested.

MUCH INTEREST IN HORSE SHOW

Everything looks promising for a successful horse show at the Park Riding School April 14 to 16. Not since the Spring of 1906 has Boston had an indoor horse show of any magnitude.

The success of the last National Horse Show in New York was so great, showing the return of interest in horses in general to both the public and society people that friends of the horse in this city have decided that the time was ripe for a first-class show.

The Park Riding Club ring is one of the largest in the country, being quite a bit larger than and wider than the ring in Mechanics building. The list of classes is a well balanced one, giving recognition to all types; high steppers, saddlers, combination horses and hunters and jumpers. There are also classes for pony model, harness.

Classes are open to all, but some of them are for amateur riders only. Entries close March 21, and should be made to H. Lyman Sayles, Park Riding School, No. 142 Ipswich street.

JIMMY WALSH TO BOX IN NEW YORK

Jimmy Walsh has accepted an offer from Tom O'Rourke to box before the next National Sporting Club of New York on April 8.

Jimmy has agreed to meet any Tom O'Rourke picks out. In the meantime he will meet Billy Allen, the featherweight champion of Canada, at Woodsocket, R. I., Monday night, and Eddie Greenwald at Milwaukee April 1.

BRONSON WILL GIVE O'KEEFE HARD BATTLE

With thirty-two rounds of all-star boxing scrapped to-night at the Armory A. A., it looks like a pretty good evening's ring entertainment, if nothing goes amiss, in the handing out some of the right kind of decisions.

Judging from the boys who are down on the cards, there will be some hard picking for the arbitrator. Considering that Henry Mellody and Jim Moriarty of Lowell boxed a twelve-round draw in the middle City not long ago, there is due to be a repetition of the same close argument with a few more fireworks added to make it more interesting.

Mellody must clean up Moriarty in order to continue his record of straight wins, but there is strong backing behind the Lowell man, who is a comer in the welt ranks.

If the fans can hardly wait for Tommy O'Keefe, the fighting Quaker, and Ray Bronson, the Hoosier dasher, to get into the ring, they know at last that the unbeatable lightweight champion of Canada will give him a thorough tryout in the main go. Bronson is a clever boxer, Young Dixon of Portsmouth.

While all the boys appear to be good for the full distance of eight rounds, there may be surprises in store.

JEFF WILL DO NEW TRAINING

By H. M. WALKER.

LOS ANGELES, March 22.—Jim Jeffries returned from the mountains hale, hunk and active, ready, according to his own frank statement to fight within the next three weeks.

To those who wondered at the white champion's good physical condition a few days after he confided to his friends he would appear but little short of marvelous. All traces of Jeff, the good fellow, have disappeared. It is Jeff the athlete that shakes hands with his friends now and from his bogish looks those same friends can almost believe that the Jeffries of seven years ago is back in the ring. Seven pounds of an old photograph to greet them.

Jim is down to 225 pounds, which means that he has shed six or seven pounds of the notch that he will scale in when he reports in the fight to the Big Event at Reno. His waist is now nearly perfect and his chest has developed full width and respect.

"I pulled off a thirty-two mile hike through the mountains one day last week, covering the distance over the roughest kind of country in less than eight hours," said Jeff. "I wasn't tired at all and I was breathing as easily at the finish as when I started. I know what I'm talking about when I say that no man with a clear mind can stand up under a stunt of that kind.

"Four solid hours of woodchopping and sawing, a visit to the burro corral and a taking in of the White Sox-Vernon ball game completed Jeff's program on the first day of his return.

"I am going into camp at Rowardennan as much for the rest as anything else," he said. "I am going strong for rowing and all that sort of work in preference to the regulation training stunts. No danger of my going stale; I know too much for that."

JEFF WAKES UP WHEN FIGHT PLACE IS PICKED

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Jim Jeffries frankly said that once a decision had been reached in regard to the location of his fight with Jack Johnson, it would not take him long to select training quarters. Jim has been as good as his word and for that matter the announcement that he would go into camp at Rowardennan in the Santa Cruz Mountains was made simultaneous with the giving out of the news that the Emeryville race track would be the scene of the championship ring event.

The promoters and Jeffries alike are to be congratulated. The match handicappers have secured an ideal ring site, while Jeffries has beaten a retreat in the mountains that will suit him to a dot.

Emeryville, where the race track is located, is a small municipality like Colma, where Wolgast and Nelson fought. As was the case in Richmond the residents of Emeryville to a man are sweden on with the notion of boosting a couple of world-beating ring men and every one from the Mayor down to the night watchman has become a booster in tireless and Ricardo interest.

This means that there will be no friction and no trouble on the part of the politicians of the little town when the date grows near and the Jeffries-Johnson pilgrimage begins. When it is all over Jeff and Richard mind no doubt, to feel that he can answer the world-famous query: "Was I without danger?" when the call comes for the night sticks, but rather an assurance that he will not be asked to divide his profits with anyone in power in the "burg" of Emeryville.

Had Passed Emeryville Up.

Emeryville race track is such a convenient and suitable location for the thing in prospect that every one wonders why the spot was not thought of sooner. The answer, I suppose, is that the promoters were not aware that Tom William's race track together with the outgoing paraphernalia that surround it, could be had. I'm a real Richard of all trades if I'm anything, decided to take their pugilistic ditto to Rich mond rather than Emeryville matter cinder up.

Outside some such place as the baseball grounds within the limits of San Francisco proper, Emeryville track is the best that could have been chosen for the big mill.

It seems well appointed ferryboats and railroad carriages instead of uncertain trolley cars. It means a short ride of known duration against one the length of which no one has gauged.

For that matter the fight crowd may be obliged to the fact that the chief photobilly will be fought across the bay. I know that I'm a lover of the track and our own ingleside alternated as race meeting places, while always attracted the keenest attendance. When the Jockey Club officials had those forts brought home to them Ingleside was closed and millionaire racing was the rule at Oakland. "It's a queer thing," said Handicapper Sweet who has now passed away, "Emeryville draws heavily from both Oakland and San Francisco, but the Oaklanders will not cross the bay to Ingleside."

Jeff Will Camp Like a Hunter.

Jeffries has promised to go into camp at Rowardennan on April 1, and if I'm not that his sleeping apartments will look some like a hunter's den than a prize fighter's domicile. If Jim is anything like he was in the old Harbin days there is no reason for supposing a change in him will keep his training's guessing once the weather becomes warm enough to warrant an occasional night being spent on the range.

Jim likes the timbered highlands better than the country road, especially if there is a rare suspicion of big game to be found in the vicinity. Such a spot will require considerable persuasion to hold Jeffries down for the number of nights illustrary thoroughbreds and punching the bag when he can get both conditions and keep sharpen his wind by methods that are more to his liking.

It is said that several members of Jim's staff have been ordered to report at Rowardennan for duty on April 1, but it is doubtful if Jeffries will take up the ordinary routine until several weeks elapse from the time he goes into camp. He will accept the company of mountain and cougar before he turns his attention to either the handball court or the gymnasium. He is known before he has been long in the Santa Cruz mountains that much of the region recesses as a hunting ground for deer and bear, and he'll be a good man to offer better those who contemplate a day's fly fishing.

In the matter of environment, Rowardennan is exactly the place Jeffries likes. He is not a man to be shut in there, he can't likely to lay on his back beneath the trees and watch the mountain skies. He is always on the go when spending his time in the mountains, and therefore when he comes forth from Rowardennan it is a safe bet that he will be in trim to fight. It should be, the only decision to be arrived at will be that Jeffries's wind is be good repair.

THOMAS KNOCKS HIS MAN OUT

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—Joe Thomas proved too much for Eddie Osborn in the windup at the Willis A. C., knocking him out in the third round. The Californian was the defender and had change to weigh in at 133 pounds, holding on while Osborn lasted.

The opening round proved that Eddie was no match for Thomas, as the latter landed a right to the jaw that put Ed on the count. He could do was to rush in and hold on to avoid punishment.

EASY FOR YANKEE SWARTZ.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., March 22.—Yankee Swartz of South Africa had an easy time of it when he met Jack Dough erty at Schmidt's in the winding at the West End A. C. Young Sam Langford and Johnny Curtis boxed a hard draw.

SAILOR BURKE WINS OVER SULLY

NEW YORK, March 22.—Sailor Burke showed too much for Eddie Sully, the sailor had a few rollicking plus showed around his person in their ten-round bout at the Lenox A. C. to-night. It is enough to say the ten rounds of fast gameness Burke did plenty of execution to win his bout by a good margin.

Tommy Jackson was to have met the sailor, but when he didn't show up Burke was substituted and he made a fight of it. He is conditioned and went into the ring best condition and was in trim for short notice. But for all that he made the sailor work hard for a decision and was creditable in the first five rounds.

"THE FRONT THAT WON'T BREAK DOWN"

Our registered trademark of coat building, "The-front-that-won't-break-down," must cause the other tailors a lot of trouble as we read their advertisements daily with references to "unbreakable fronts," "fronts that will not curl" and the like.

As a matter of fact almost any tailor in Boston can build a better coat than the ready made stores can offer you. Our competitors are not the good tailors of Boston. The tailors are friends of ours. The people whom we are anxious to have you avoid are the ready made clothing houses, with their extravagant claims, high rents, high salaried salesmen, lavish advertising and wooden looking clothes. Buy tailor made clothes. We should prefer to have you buy them here, but get them somewhere, anyhow. Our prices are $15 to $25 for suit (or overcoat). If you order to-day or this evening and must have your clothes delivered Saturday, we will get them through on schedule—although we would rather have until next week.

Mirandy on the "School for Wives"

By Dorothy Dix

"MAY JANE," said Mirandy, "was I ever a-readin' to me, de odder day, out of de paper, where hit says dat, over in London, some charitable person has started a school where young women, what is gwine to git married, can go an' learn de fust duty of wives, which is how to cook.

"Bless Gord," says I, when I hears dat, 'de light is shuly breakin', an' somebody is gittin' at de root of dis hen's divorce evil, which is mostly to be found in de frajin' pan. Yassir,' I says, 'I spec dat de very fust inklin' dat most men has dat dey ain't married a pie-feathered angel, is when dey sets dere teeth, for de fust time, to a steak dat seems tuk a shoe sole, or dey gits one of de bride's biscuits in deir mouf. Den trouble des comes an' collps' down in dat house; for a man what's wrastlin' wid a lot of tough steak, an' heavy bread, an' soggy pie, ain't got no heart. He's all stomach.

"Yassir, dyspepsy on account of a man's havin' to eat his bride's cookin' has been de death of mo' young love dan any odder cause.

"I've Seed Men Des Fade Away"

"I've seed men dats married to good women git tired an' leave 'em. I've seed 'em fade away. I've seed men dat was mahried to fools' pledges seek out of de back window in de night time an' never come back no mo'; but I ain't never seed nor is I heard tell of, a man dat was married to a woman what was a bum cook dat was a wife deserter.

"Nawsir, you can't drive a man away from a lady what is real handy wid de pots and kettles, an' knows how to season, an', dateofore, dat school over dere in London where dey is gwine to 'struct dem po' little candidates for maternoty de first principles of hobbin' a husband's love is gwine to do missionary work in de world.

"Dat certainly is a grand idea, to have a school for wives, an' hits beginnin' at de beginnin' to teach 'em how to cook, but hit oughter go furder dan dat, an' teach 'em a lot of odder things dat hit takes most of us wives thirty years an' de breakin' up of a set or two of crockery to find out.

The Education of Brides

"Now if dey'd make me one of de perfessers in dat school, after I had taught de scholars how to bribe a pa'k chap so dat hit would melt in yo' mouf, I'd teach 'em enough sense not to jump in an' ask men dat was fired to smart women des a tired an' hungry man for money, for a good dinner, an' is smokin' his pipe, an' is gwine to do, her husband is bound to tell her dat she can't do hit, so as to show dat no is de boss of de family.

"Dyspepsy from bride's cookin' has been de death of mo' young love dan any odder cause" de do' of a evening.

"Yassir, I sho' would prone hit into dem little brides dat, as de Good Book says, is dere a time an' a place for everything an' de time an' de place for gittin' anything out of a man is after he is filled up wid a good dinner, an' is smokin' his pipe, an' he's dat walk, an' dat he ain't gwine to let no woman henpeck him: an' den dey begins to pump him a few glates an' things, an' befo' dey knows hit, de neighbors does come in to separate 'em.

"Hit certainly is a sad endin' to love's young dreams, an' hit all might o' been saved of somebody had had enough gumption to a'aught dat gal, befo' marriage, dat de way to git along wid a man, in peace, is to go along an' do what you want to fust, an' den advise wid him afterward about hit.

"And I'd teach dem gals, what's gwine to git married, to always put de best foot fo'most, an' to bring a lot on domestic to dere husbands, because a man don't know nothin' about a woman except what she tells him, an' he takes his wife at de price she gits hangs around her neck.

"For dat reason, any woman dat's got enough sense to keep out of de fire always gits cool to her husband when she's bought a bargain, an' her cake turned out right. An' she lays low an' says nothin' when she gits tooken in by an Eyetalian peddler, what sells her a silk dress what ain't nothin' but cotton, an' when de biscuits is flat, an' he'll go around braggin' what a wonderful cook what a thrifty wife he's got.

"An' I'd teach dem brides not to be a sparin' in nuts' de soft soap wid dese husbands, but to put hit on wid a liberal hand. For a man has fust got to be told dat he is de handsomest, an' de smartest pusson dat ever lived, an' ef his wife won't tell him, he'll hunt up some older lady by de name of Sapphira what will.

Use Plenty of "Soft Soap"

"An' I'd teach dem brides dat man is a curis animal, what can't be drove wid a loose rein, nor yet wid a snaffle, but sometimes you has to use one, an' sometimes you has to use de odder. If you let him have his head too much he'll bolt an' git away from you altogether; an if you keep him on de curb he'll kick over de traces an' smash de whole contrapsun.

"Dat'sho, dere is times when a wife ought to shet her eyes, an' be as blin' as a bat, an' dere is odder times when she ought to have eyes in de back of her hald, an' ev'y one of 'em wid a search-light in 'em, to keep up wid him; an' de success of maternony depends on her knowin' when to go to bed an' go to sleep, and pretend not to know dat he has been out at night when he gits home at four o'clock, by de marnin', an' when to take de stove lifter to him when he don't show up at supper time in de evenin'.

"Yassum, I sho' could give dat college for a million a be of valyble advice on how to be de Perfect Wife an' git along wid a husband to Reasonable Peace. You bet I'm, like of dat ain't so. De dast'l deaf bit.

Helping Your Employes

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

IF you are a man at the head of a business which necessitates many assistants, there is an opportunity for you to be doing much good, in a quiet way.

Instead of accepting the work of your employes as so much material to be paid for with as much money and taking no further notice of your men beyond service and pay, make it your pleasure to watch for the young boys who possess noticeable business qualities and to encourage them.

Such a boy was observed and advanced to a slightly better position with a small increase of pay by an employer who shortly afterward sold his business to a new firm.

Four years afterward the old employer chanced to meet the youth, now a young man, and found him discouraged by the fact that he still occupied the same position and received the same remuneration of four years previous, despite the earnest effort he had made to please his new employer.

The youth was contemplating a change when the old employer again interested himself and obtained another advance, a new employer had not given the boy a thought beyond seeing that he received his salary regularly. Yet he was a valuable man, and his loss would have been hard to replace.

In our strivig industrial, competitive system, with its seasons of great prosperity and its season of corresponding depression, young men feel timid about giving up a certain position, even when unsatisfactory, for an uncertain possibility of improvement.

And so they drudge on, year after past, not liking to ask for higher wages and let her work, lest they receive their discharge, but considering that they deserve recognition from their employers. If there are such men in your employ, make it a resolve to find them and to speak some word or give some hope, which shall rouse their flagging spirits and send them to their tasks with new ambition in their hearts. Your business will be the better for it, and you will be the happier for it.

Better help three unworthy employes, and be obliged to put them back, or forward, than miss the opportunity to advance one who is really deserving of your trust.

Meanwhile, to every toiler, in any line of employment in the world to-day, who feels that he is not getting his just deserts, let me say a word. That word is: You yourself are making your own destiny.

If you will realize this old truth fully, and quietly, but constantly, accept the word to yourself, for progress and advancement, you will bring your employer by the law of suggestion to see your real value.

Instead of going to your work with despondent thoughts and a discouraged heart, go with brave thoughts and fine assertions that better things are coming your way soon; that they are already here, in the invisible realm, and that you are making them take visible shape.

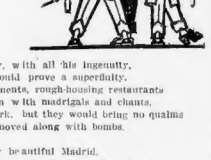
Not a Chance

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

The American college graduate is not likely to win success in Europe.—Ambassador Whitelaw Reid.

ALAS! the college graduate, although his massive dome
Be filled with four-ply intellect, he's got to stay at home.
'Tis not for him to caracole on Piccadilly at midnight on Park Lane,
Or toss tamales on the heads of passers-by in Spain,
Or wake the Nevski Prospekt up by hawling college glees,
What time the subjects of the Czar are wont to take their ease.

Along the Strand, some years ago, he might have won renown
By stealing all the barber poles and doctors' signs in town:
It might have been considered cute to pause upon Pell Mell
And fright the gaping bobbies with the din of college yell,
But since the Suffragettes have come, the proletariat
Of London wouldn't sit up much at goings on like that!



In Petersburg the rah-rah boy, with all his ingenuity,
As a disturber of the peace would prove a superfluity,
For painting stripes on monuments, rough-housing restaurants
And making hideous the dawn with madrigals and chants,
Go fairly well in old New York, but they would bring no qualms
To citizens accustomed to be moved along with bombs.

And as for Barcelona fair, or beautiful Madrid,
We fear they'd fail to understand the Yankee college kid;
Where rabid revolution may awaken at a touch,
The worst of campus caperings will not excite one much.
And so, although across the seas he wistfully may glance,
The wild waves breaking on the beach advise him, "Not a chance!"

Both Were Obstinate

THE HIRED MAN HAD TO SETTLE THE DISPUTE

By KENNETT HARRIS

DICK SWAFFIELD, having completed his purchases, turned to Old Man Somarindyk. "If you change your mind about that there mewl, Uncle, jest drop a yaird in the office an' let me know."

"I'll do better than that," said Old Man Somarindyk, sourly. "I'll stand on my bald atop of the Methody church steeple an' holler for you. Lemme tell you, I know my mind. I hain't a-changin' it Mondays nur Sundays like it was a shirt. When I say 'no' I don't mean 'maybe so' nur yet 'yes.' I mean 'NO.'"

"That's all right, Uncle. I hain't a-forcin' from," said Swaffield. "I was offerin' you a mighty good trade, but if you don't want to make it, you needn't to. If a feller thinks meant jest what he said when he talked trade, I'd get me my ascension robes made right off."

"When I say a thing, I stick to it," said Old Man Somarindyk, "an' I'll stick to it till the cows come home, an' forever after. I'm no cnat-iron weathercock, fresh greased, to switch around every time a breeze strikes my tail feathers. No, siree."

Bad for Bricks and Mortar

"If there's a brick wall in Uncle Levi's way, it's so much the worse for the wall," Washington Hancock remarked, after old man Somarindyk left. "He'll butt at it as long as his hald holds out, an' he may butt through it. Either way, it ain't a good thing for bricks and mortar."

"Don't you believe in doin' the way you say you'll do?" queried the storekeeper.

"I certainly do if his nathin' with sense to it," replied Hancock, "but I wouldn't be like Lafe Suthrup an' his wife was, ef'n I was to be able to beg an' never change my mind. 'Cordin to my notion, a man's mind is a heap like his shirt. He's a heap pleasanter to have around if he changed it when it's dirty."

"Lafe was about as mulish that way as anybody you ever see, an' his wife was worse than what he was. When they got married, everybody knew there'd be trouble right from the jump, an' ever'body got posted same as to when it'd come. They wasn't sure enough, but it didn't break out till they was both gettin' fo'ahde well along.

"It's this-a-way. If I knew right well that Rufe here would haul off an' paste me one in the eye ever' time I told him he short-weighted me, I'd be sorter keerful how I made any such breks, nur if he knew I was dead on to him (which he does), he'd throw in a little extry somuer's bane me take my money. But I never did say I would an' we'd get on together right well, like we allus do."

"I want to say right here that any time you want to take your trade to Allen or anywheres else, you won't find me hangin'

"They Both Was Keerful"

"That's all right, Rufus," said Hancock, soothingly. "We'll say no more about it. Jest be keerful, that's all. Wasn't I was a-goin' to say about Lafe an' his wife was that they was both keerful. Both of you had things right along, the way we all do, but they had the sense to keep their mouths shut respectin' each other's foolishness until one time when Mrs. Suthrup was a-house-cleanin', she left a pail of suds in the passage an' Lafe stumbled over it an' took a strip of hide off his shinbone.

"Lafe limped out the gosh damged pail an' the chicken-headed gumps that set in there says Lafe, an' he drawed off an' kicked the pail an' the sudsy water clean down the passage an' into the middle of the sittin' room floor. Mrs. Suthrup heered him holler an' come out of the kitchen an' found him groanin' an' rubbin' his shin. 'Lafayette Suthrup' she says, 'be ashamed of yourself!' Which he pened to you, anyway?

"'I've broke my leg over that dag gonod pail you-all done left around to kill me with,' says Lafe.

"'What pail are you talkin' about?' says she, lookin' around. 'I don't see no pail.'

"'You will if you go into the sittin' room,' says Lafe.

"So she went into the sittin' room an' seen the pail upended on her fine Brussels carpet, an' if she didn't say anythin' as kind as Lafe had, I bet she thought it.

"Right then she smelled her bread burnin' an' ran back into the kitchen. When Lafe came in, she looked up from scrapin' the char off a loaf, an' says, 'Where'd you put that pail?'

"'Where'd you suppose? It's where you left it an' it'll certainly stay there 'fore long, me, by Jucks.' If you want it, I reckon you'd better go get it.'

"'If you think I'm a-goin' to trek it, you're sure badly fooled,' says his wife. 'It'll stay right where it is till the last trump, if nobody picks it up but me.'

"'Please yourself,' says Lafe; 'an' that was the last said about it. But she didn't pick it up, an' neither did he, an' there it lay, strekin' out like a sore thumb, on the sittin' room floor.

"An' from that day neither one said a decent word for the other, an' a kind o' Feiks came to the house, an' when they saw the pail there Mrs. Suthrup 'ud say, 'Lafe hiked it that there in one of his tantrums, an' he's a-waitin' for me to pick it up.' So, of course, it got around the country, an' Lafe had he'd a dozen digfits with fellers 'at devilled him about the pail in his sittin' room.

But Would Never Touch the Pail

"Every week Mrs Suthrup 'ud go in an' redd up the sittin' room, sweepin' an' dustin' an' rubbin', but she never laid a finger on the pail, an' whenever she looked at it her eyes would snap an' her lips come tight together.

"Every week Mr. Suthrup 'ud go in some feelin' kinder wishful to make up, but whenever he'd pause the settin' room an' seen the pail upended there, he'd grit his teeth and go in to his vittles like he hated 'em. Once the Ladies' Aid voted to hold a meetin' at Sister Suthrup's, hopin' to shame her, but they held their meetin' with that pail right in the middle of 'em.

"Who gave him?' asked the storekeeper.

"'Neither one,' replied Hancock. 'I reckon the pail would be there yet, only one night the hired man went to town an' got full, an' when he got back he strayed in to the settin' room in the dark. Lafe an' his wife was both asleep when all of a sudden there was a bang that woke 'em right up an' a crash of broken glass and a string of swear words that would have dinged the hair off your old hald.

"Lafe jumped out of bed an' lit the lamp an' went to where the noise come from. There was the hired man settin' on the floor an' rubbin' his shin an' the winder lights was busted out where Lafe an' his wife was both asleep.

"'What did Lafe say?' asked Dick Swaffield.

"'I wasn't there,' answered Hancock. 'All I know is that he fired the hired man for breakin' the winder.'

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

GEORGE had been away on business for a whole long week, and during that time he sent her four letters, six telegrams, cards and fifty picture postcards. Why, then was there a touch of coldness in her greeting when he flew to her arms on his return? "Dearest," he whispered, "what is the matter?"

"Oh, George," she said, "you don't send me a kiss in your ninth letter!"

"My precious," he replied, "that night I had steak and onions for dinner, and you wouldn't have liked a kiss after onions, would you?"

And such is the unfathomable power of love, she was satisfied, and settled to her work.

Miss Alice Nielsen Writes of Grand Opera "In English"

In the final article of her series, Miss Alice Nielsen prophesies about the future of grand opera in America. Her espousal of the cause of opera in English and her confidence in American composers are features of this article.

By ALICE NIELSEN

WHAT is the future of grand opera in America?

This question, in recent concert tour over the greater part of the United States, I presume I was asked the question hundreds of times. It is a topic of conversation with those who were both intimately and remotely concerned with music.

Conductors, singers and pianists were naturally most eager to talk of it. The journalists apparently believed that no interview would be complete without some phase of it. And I recall pleasurable discussions of the subject with cultured people, who were known for their appreciation of literature or the drama, or who were identified with the other various arts.

This unanimity of thought has significance. It declares our growing regard for music, and makes the position of every Western cities a virile interest in eventually having permanent lyric theatres of their own. However momentous may be the widening influence of opera, it seems to me that the scope and involved nature of the theme must forbid a too eager forecast of the future, and must make any positive or absolute statement such as I have been repeatedly pressed to give, both ill-advised and premature.

An American Always

The subject is highly emotive. It is indissolubly linked with certain elements of our musical life and their development, which must engage our consideration. The growth of grand opera as a democratic institution in America will be either advanced or impeded by them.

Having been urged to express my thought upon this matter, I shall now endeavor to give through the columns of the BOSTON AMERICAN some impressions formed during my career, which may, in part, at least, make answer to the original question.

As for the relative ease of singing in the several languages, it must be conceded that Italian is the most fluent and vocal. The French suffers from nasal, and the German from guttural consonants. Although our own tongue contains some badly closed vowels and awkward consonantal combinations, I would simply reply to the oft-made one who compiles that it is unsingable: Repair your diction.

First of all, I am an American. In whatever capital of the world I may have chanced to appear, I have always been proud to feel I was an American singer. A lineage springing from the Mayflower's resolute band of Pilgrim Fathers, and the inheritance of their patriotism in laying the corner-stone of our political and religious freedom, permit me to make no apologies for an uncompromising advocacy of our great possibilities in musical art and for a firm belief in our complete and ultimate realization of them.

A discussion of the future of opera in America at once involves the ability of American composers to write opera of our own, the relative fitness of our language for lyric art, the preparation of our young men and women to sing it and the operas of all schools, and the qualification of the critics in judgment, who are to guide or blast their careers.

The second point first, for it is quickest answered.

Opera in English

Our English tongue is obviously enough an eloquent and resourceful medium as found in the King James version of the Bible, in the poetry of Tennyson, and in the dramas of Shakespeare, who through it, has given the consummate expressionist of all literature. But neither elegance nor coherence could be sought for in the wretchedly translated opera libretto, which gives the language in mental servitude to a foreign text, and then requires it to masquerade as pure English.

To observe the demands of metre and rhythm, and to exercise care in the disposition of the vowel sounds, a certain freedom with the original text must at times be taken, but a good English translation of opera is possible, nevertheless. Charles Henry Meltzer has proven his excellent translation of Wagner's four operas, completing the Nibelungen Ring.

One composition of opera is a more complex matter. There are two distinctions and comparisons to make. The creative function in music is not immediately contemporary with the interpretive. Evolution teaches that the interpretive must precede it. According to Spencer, one theory of the origin of music is that aboriginal man endeavored to imitate the song of birds both by voice and primitive reed. Our musical art is but in its infancy. It is beyond possibility that we should write great music quite as soon as we have learned to sing it. As interpreters of opera and lyric drama, our singing actors have invaded the theatres of all Europe. Their reception has often been cool, at times frigid, but they have persevered, and have won by sheer merit.

Musical Evolution.

The growth of the large orchestras in this country, and even our present attainments in orchestral composition furnish a perfect analogy. The orchestra precedes the opera in the musical evolution of a people, and naturally so, for it is but one element of the opera without some symphony orchestras have been playing the great works in their home cities and on their tours for more than a quarter of a century; whereas, save for outside trials of at most a fortnight, New Orleans excepted, grand opera has always been confined only to New York.

Whether as a coincidence or as a result of this minor primal field of orchestral writing, we have developed such men as Mr. Chadwick, Mr. A. K. Paine, Mr. MacDowell, Mr. Foote, Mr. Hadley, Meltzer and others, who have written works which have compelled the interest of Europe. Of late, I am told that associated with the admirable musical philanthropy maintained at Norfolk, Ct., through the generous patronage of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stoeckel is an organization called the University Club, which invites an American composer each year to contribute one work, either choral or orchestral, with no restrictions as to form or supplementary for production, to be first performed under his direction at one of the society's triennial festivals in June. It would seem that such an organized means of incentive must go far towards finally establishing an American school of composition, and of individual masters.

Is it not then a logical deduction that, when opera shall have become at least to a degree as democratic an institution in our American cities as our great symphonic and choral societies, the influence of established performance of operas, and the greater possibility of producing new works shall serve to evolve a national school of composition, from which, of whose members to create opera shall be comparable to that of our singers now to interpret it?

How to Prevent Gray Hair.

When gray hairs first begin to appear, prompt action should be taken to nourish the scalp and prevent their further spread. Regular brushing, massage of the scalp and occasional shampooing help to prolong the vitality of the hair and preserve its natural color. But it is absolutely essential that these methods be assisted with some form of vital nourishment which the decaying roots of the hair require. Numerous preparations for this purpose have appeared on the market during the past twenty years, but many of them have proved more harmful than otherwise. It is now agreed by competent authorities and those who have had the greatest success that HAYS HAIR HEALTH is the safest and most effective restorative for restoring prematurely gray hairs, and for reviving the right tint to the scalp. Its constantly increasing sale and the fact that it has held its great popularity for nearly a quarter of a century is proof that this scientific preparation does the work to the entire satisfaction of users. All reliable druggists recommend it and sell it in 50 cent and dollar bottles, or it can be purchased from the manufacturers, Hahs Hay Specialist Co., Newark, N. J.

"Harvest Moon" at the Colonial Is a Convincing Play

Thought, deep thought about things that the public never thinks at all, and that college professors are said to think about, marks "The Harvest Moon" as a very unusual kind of play.

Augustus Thomas, the author, is known as a writer of successful plays. His reputation heretofore has been so secure a project that the people would probably like and weave a play about it. But in this way most successful plays are written.

But Augustus Thomas is a dramatist. He delves into the subconscious, whatever that may be, and finds there mysteries and the theories of subconscious cerebration, and then he writes "The Witching Hour," and a number of other plays, and then he goes quietly around in his brain and writes a play entitled "The Harvest Moon," and behold, the public goes mad.

Therefore, the "Harvest Moon" has possibilities of discussion, some ranging from the author's personality to the well-crowded point of "Do Clothes Make the Man?" In "The Harvest Moon" there is the suggestion that the play to the intellect instead of the fanny bone, the piece is entertaining and was appreciated last night by a large audience.

The first act of "The Harvest Moon" is pure comedy, in which the characters are drawn cleverly and the dialogue is filled with brilliant dialogue. The second act carries on the comedy, but the third suggestion deep-stuff is wonderfully effective.

Because of his acting, and a capable supporting company, the play is made delightful. Mr. Beresford leaves the heart of the acting on his own shoulders, and does it remarkably well. But the others help out some that a little. Miss Foster and Miss Davidson also do some excellent work.

Grand Opera House.

"Billy, the Boy Artist," a musical farce in two acts, is the Grand Opera House attraction this week. The show is a lively one from start to finish, filled with catchy music and good comedy. A large company is employed in the production of the farce, and all the characters are excellently portrayed. Fergus Gerken in the role of Billy, the crowd going every minute he is on the stage. Theodore Hamilton and Jack Gardner represent Professor O. Howe Wise and Professor A. B. Smart, respectively, and especially clever. Ethel Nasser certainly makes a real full grown young woman boy, like a scrub cabbage alongside of her rapid young mamma.

Keith's.

Simon and Simon in "High Life in Jail" are presenting a satirical little comedy-playlet at Keith's Theatre this week. It is only one of a very strong series of vaudeville attractions on the bill.

Mrs. Eva Fay, the mind-reader and explorer of the occult, is repeating her great successes. Ancliffe and his "mind-reading" pigs are another offering. The "Piano Phiends," five young men and six young women, sing, play and play on a certain flutty piano, and furnish a very delightful little novelty act. The three Lloyds in a comedy foot-act, thorough artists in grotesque comedy. Lovejoy and Lee is good.

American Music Hall.

If "A Princess of Israel" ever declared as does Adeline Bayer at the American Music Hall this week, the wonder that David forgot to sing his psalms and King Solomon collected a thousand wives to fill his private museum. Miss Bayer is brought here from Cologne for this week to be a new addition to the library. The scene is the roof of a palace and Solomon looks her over from a divan. The princess who is dark, big eyed and beautiful, dances for him. She has bare feet and brown hair which covers her whole body, including her face. She exits on all fours, and is led back with her to remove the veil. She does so and finally takes it off of her face. Her real child only in what resembles a gas flame's black eyeliner out, and mixed in front. Her limbs seem free of covering. She becomes very interesting to the boys and after watching her gyrate for a few minutes he gets her to dance and makes off with her. Outside of regards dancing Miss Bayer is not remarkable. As regards draperies and suggestion she caused one to wonder where was the Watch and Ward Society.

The Star Boat, a playlet which winds up in a bathing beach, which one of the contestants is apparently knocked out by a wave, we played by Miss Gale and Mr. Hall.

"The Little Blonde Lady," as played by Miss Hope Booth, with Messrs. Bell, Beaumer and Howard Shut made a decided hit with the audience. Miss Booth is one of Hathaway's monkey's amused. The Delli Opera Troupe had no difficulty in winning applause and sang for its final number the popular song from Faust in English.

Amusing pictures were drawn by Harry McKay, the famous caricaturist. Caine and Odom pleased in vaudeville with song and monologue and some really clever dancing was done by Farley and Clarke.

Castle Square.

The patrons of the Castle Square theatre are being treated to a week of farce in the Castle Square Stock Company, which made its first appearance on the Paris boards in "A Night at Rightton" and England and the United States through the impersonation of the accident-by Marie Tempest. Mary Hampton will be seen in the role of Kitty Silverton who at the death of her father finds herself in possession of a fortune and fortune. Miss Bailey proves herself a captivating comedienne in the role from Peru. Donald Meek added another triumph to his already long list of character impersonations. The entire performance from start to finish is delightful and the work of the cast as a whole is high commendable.

Tremont.

Raymond Hitchcock's third week at the Tremont Theatre in "The Man Who Owned Broadway" opened with just as great popularity as it did when it was first seen here. Hitchcock always has a liking for the musical comedies by George M. Cohan, because there is such a dash and swing about them.

Park.

William Hodge is nearing the end of his third month at the Park Theatre with "The Man from Home," and there are a fine audience in attendance last night.

Hollis.

If anything more is needed to clinch the generally recognized view that the average Warren traveling salesman is a humorist then it surely is furnished by James Forbes's farmcart comedy, "The Traveling Salesman," which began its second and last week at the Hollis Street Theatre last evening.

Shubert.

It is a refreshing fact that Lew Fields's mammoth musical comedy production, "The Midnight Sons," is making at the Shubert Theatre, but it can remain only two weeks more.

Boston.

The few remaining performances of this week are all that remain for "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" at the Boston Theatre. Helen Calleam is the leading woman and Edward Phillips Mora and Rose Pompette has proved herself an actress of extraordinary versatility and most pleasing personality.

Howard Athenaeum.

The lovers of virile gladiatorial acts an opportunity this week of seeing Jack McAuliffe, the retired lightweight champion in a specialty that is filled with interest. Sousman completes a tour for Europe, where he will appear in continental countries. Hayes Trio, Lamb and Phillips Sisters, Gertie Lindall and her "pickaninnies" and a ball of dance complete the Howard program. The burlesque attraction this week is furnished by the "Jolly Girls."

Gaiety Theatre.

The Dainty Duchess company at the Gaiety Theatre presents an entertaining bill. There are "pranks" and "show girls" in the company and there is also "the same medium," Frederick Ireland. Harry Woods and Harvey Green are the comedians.

Waldron's Casino.

Waldron's Casino offers a bill of exceptional merit this week. The attraction being Rice & Barton's Big Gaiety Extravaganza company, which holds a leading place among travelling burlesque shows. The company is headed by Charles Barton, one of the funniest burlesque comedians in the business. There are ten comedians and fifteen pretty women with the company and they are presented in a "Night at Brighton Beach." Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Mack are two of the funniest burlesque concerts ever seen in this city.

Columbia.

The attraction at the Columbia Theatre for the week is "The Cozy Corner Girls," nearly fifty singing, dancing and comedy experts, headed by those merry comedians, Ricky W. Craig and Mac Rae and Manning. The entire company appears in a two-act burlesque entitled "Room 6" and "Broadway to Paris."

Bowdoin Square.

Ten big acts from the entertaining program at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. The Johnny Brown Brothers present a musical novelty that has not been excelled by any act that has appeared at the house. Lee Ting Foo, a Chinese juggler, is another clever classical specimen.

Austin & Stone's.

The bear women and the tiny bear captured by Colonel Frank P. Stone in Maine divided the honors of the day yesterday at Austin & Stone's Museum. To the children of Boston will be given the honor of naming the young bears and their mamma. It is suggested for the cunning little cub who is being brought up on a nursing bottle.

TWO ACTRESSES NOW ATTRACTIONS AT THE THEATRES

Scenic.

The entertainment at the Scenic Temple Berkeley street and Warren avenue, is exceptionally pleasing this week, and at both performances yesterday afternoon and evening the several numbers were received most cordially by immense audiences.

New Palace.

At the New Palace a dozen vaudeville acts alternate with the pictures to make a great show. Marcell, the Egyptian Driscoll, Donald & Co. in a dramatic sketch, Rivers & Du Mon whirlwind dancers were among the attractions.

Hub.

Manager Mack has prepared an exceptional bill for Holy Week, including many vaudeville favorites and the latest motion pictures. There were big audiences all day yesterday.

Comique.

At the Comique this week there are new and sensational motion pictures and several soloists of reputation in new illustrated songs.

Beacon.

The latest Boston theatre began the week auspiciously with big houses. A bill of pleasing excellence was offered.

Fashionables Make an Early Migration to Europe

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Every week is absolutely devoid of any evening of social interest, and the few so-called functions that have taken place locally abandoned the world and its gaieties for the week at least, and are occupying their time with meditations on other worldliness and the general perpetration for the busy season to come. But the majority are on the wing and keeping track of their comings and going is a hard task at this time.

Among those who are about arriving on the other side is Miss Dorothy Gray of Jersey Park, who sailed for an extended stay to England and Mr. and Mrs. Chester W. Lasell of Exeter street, who have taken their two attractive daughters, Hildegarde and Marion to Bermuda, where they are resting after the gaieties of the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Grafton St. Leo Abbott are back at their country place at Concord from the tropics, where they spent several weeks. They were for the greater part, of the time in Jamaica.

The J. Parker Burrs of Marlboro street are among the most recent arrivals at Bermuda. Directly upon their return they will go to their country place in Milton.

Captain and Mrs. William F. Humphrey have arrived at their home on Arlington avenue, Brookline, from their six months' absence in Southern Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Dupont, Jr., of Newbury street, Longwood, and Miss Dupont's mother, Mrs. Wellington Mills of Commonwealth avenue, are planning to leave early the coming month for a trip of several weeks' duration to the Pacific coast.

The Francis Skinners of Dedham, who have been abroad for several months, are at present in Cannes.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Peabody, Jr., with the Misses Peabody, Miss Martha and Miss Sylvia Peabody, have been for the past two weeks at Nassau, will return to their home in Milton next Tuesday.

The Thomas Lindall Winthrops, who have been at their Beacon street residence throughout the Winter, are about arriving in Europe. They will remain abroad several weeks and will spend the greater part of their time motoring on the Continent.

Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater is to spend the Summer at Bar Harbor. Miss Esther Lloyd and Mr. Nelson Slater are to go aboard about the end of June with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lloyd, father and sister-in-law of Mrs. Slater, who are planning an interesting autumn trip on the Continent.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell G. Fessenden, who were married March 10, at the home of the bride's father, Harry Bigelow Bulfinch of the Fenway, have sailed for Naples. They will spend Easter in Rome and will later visit the wives of Mrs. Fessenden's Sagamond. They will return home early in May. Mrs. Fessenden before her marriage was Miss John Linzee Snelling, at whose home Mrs. Bulfinch, Miss Lucy Lowell and their daughters, Miss Hester and Miss Amy Lowell were hostesses on several weeks ago, are expected to return to Beacon St. May.

The Misses Katherine and Louisa Loring of Beverly Farms are at Aiken, S. C., for a stay of several weeks.

Miss Julia Ward Howe of Beacon street, president of the Woman's Journal of this city, has issued a call for the annual stockholders' meeting to be held at the home of Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, at No. 45 Boylston avenue, Dorchester, on Monday, April 4.

The French Ambassador and Miss Jusserand, the Danish Minister and Countess Mothe, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Major General and Mrs. John P. Story, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Saltonstall, Mrs. Ogden Tilney, Mrs. Stanley Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bacon, Senator and Mrs. Nelson Carter Sessions and Mrs. Chauncey De-Witt, Mrs. Elliot Sohier and Dr. and Mrs. Richard Fitz are among the patrons and patronesses for the special performance of "The White Sister" in Washington on April 6 of next month. Miss Lewis Allen of the chief attraction and her art as well as that of the other players will be given in the interests of St. Catharine's House, a house for self-supporting women, which is directed by the Sisters of Mercy.

Mrs. Lars Anderson of Brookline and Washington heads the list of patronesses for the hunt ball, which is one of the chief topics of interest to fashionable people at the present time. The ball will be given on the evening of April 8, and has a long and imposing list of patronesses.

Probably the most conspicuously popular figure at the large shrubs box at the Navy Yard on the last Wednesday of the month will be the former Boston girls, the Misses Julia and Alice Sawyer, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George von L. Meyer.

The James J. Storrows have been entertaining at their country place in Lincoln over the week end.

The Boston colony of Palm Beach this week welcomed to its midst Mr. and Mrs. William A. Tucker and Miss Marion Tucker of Bay State road. The Tuckers are occupying the Royal Poinciana.

Among this week's departures for Europe will be Mrs. Nathaniel Spiss Walker of Buckminster road in Brookline and her daughter, Miss Nathalie Wales Walker. Mrs. Walker and daughter will sail for the Mediterranean, and have decided to spend the Summer months in Switzerland.

Health and Beauty Queries

BY MISS MAE MARTYN.

C. F. D.—You can you do not like to follow the new style, by shampooing the hair once your hair is streaked with different shades of color. These streaks are rendered by the use of soap and water. Alice.—If the licking of your sweetheart embarrasses you, stop using face powder. The next time you go to the drug store get four ounces of spurmax, dissolve it in half pint of hot water and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This makes a fine complexion beautifier that will rid you of that "shiny," greasy look and give your skin a clear, fresh and youthful appearance. REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS FEW TO-DAY

Few sales were reported in the real estate market to-day, but these involved a number of good parcels, one being the large frame house, stable and 34,113 square feet of land at No. 67 Walnut park, near Walnut avenue, Roxbury, which has been sold by Elizabeth H. Reynolds to Louis Greenblatt, the title passing through Ellis Reynolds. This estate is assessed on a total valuation of $14,200, of which $10,200 is on the land.

J. Sumner Draper and Mark Temple Dow have purchased from Charles H. Pearson the vacant lot of land on Boylston street, next to the corner of Fairfield street, Back Bay, containing 3,192 square feet, on which they are to erect a five-story building for the use of the Fiske Rubber Company of Chicopee, who have taken a twenty-year lease of the same. The price of the land was more than double the assessed value of $35,500. Whitcomb, Wood & Co. were the brokers in the sale, and also represented the purchasers in making the lease.

Another Roxbury estate sold is that at No. 1 Marbury terrace, near Amory street, which has been sold by Roscoe H. Barrows to Mary J. Kaveney et al. It comprises a frame dwelling and 4,668 square feet of land, all taxed for $5,600, of which $1,600 is on the land.

Frederick H. Trethewey has sold to Louis W. Davenport the frame dwelling house and 4,200 square feet of land at No. 46 Clifton street, corner of Norfolk street, West Roxbury. This estate is assessed for $2,400, of which amount $400 is on the land.

A lot of land on Rockville street, near Parley avenue, West Roxbury, taxed for 35 cents a foot, has been sold by John Hayes et al, trustees, to Hattie E. Patterson.

Joseph Balch of the Dedham building has sold for Ada M. Roberts of Chestnut Hill the property at the corner of High and Lowder streets, Dedham, comprising nearly one acre of land, a large modern colonial house and a garage. The purchaser is Mr. Harry A. Fablan, purchasing agent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, who will immediately occupy the premises.

1915 REPORTS SHOW SUCCESS

Fifty-four representatives of the various organizations were present at the first meeting of the directors of Boston-1915. By-laws were adopted, the election of Henry Abrahams and A. E. Ullman as secretary and assistant secretary was ratified and added impetus was given the movement.

The selection of the executive committee will be made by the thirteen groups of especially interested trades. The treasurer will be chosen by a committee of seven, on ways and means, later to be appointed.

On the suggestion of F. A. Flynn it was decided to refer the matter of plan and scope for the 1915 exposition to the various conferences for expressions of their opinions, each conference being requested as to what part it will take in the enterprise.

REV. DR. MYERS IN $50,000 SUIT

Declaring that he has been humiliated and degraded because of alleged malicious and false statements, the Rev. Bradford W. Bauder of Lyons, N. Y., is suing Rev. Dr. Courtland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple, for $50,000. The suit against Dr. Myers was brought in Syracuse and Dr. Bauder charges that he was compelled to accept a life of inaction in the ministry because of alleged interference on the part of Dr. Myers.

Dr. Myers when seen at his home in Riverbank court denied that he was guilty of the suit and said he had not been notified of any action. Furthermore, he said he had not seen Dr. Bauder in some time and refused to discuss the matter.

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

Dreben said the branch in addition to its stands ready again to help out the Irish party, and the Joan of Arc Literary club will guarantee a good sum, which will be paid over at a meeting to be held soon. Miss Crehan presided as auctioneer at a cake sale. Cake made by Miss Stella A. Brantelly brought the top price, with Miss Hannah Loughane second.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

LOCAL COPPER STOCKS HEAVY

STATE STREET, March 22.—The stock market showed strength in Wall Street this afternoon, but business was on an extremely limited scale. A good many of the leading stocks were not quoted, which shows how narrow the market is.

Locally copper stocks were heavy, but this was due to dullness more than anything else. Offerings were light and out side of a 10-point drop in Calumet & Hecla shares to 660, there was nothing to attract attention. This decline in Calumet & Hecla was significant, coming at the price it is about equal to a point compared with other stocks. Hancock, Mass., North Butte and Nevada Consolidated were also fractionally lower.

Opening prices in New York were slightly irregular, following the lead set by London. Recoveries in Reading and Union Pacific gave the market stimulus, even if it did not bring activity. The listeners were favorably affected by the success of the New York city $150,000,000 4 per cent. bond issue.

Of the 435 bids submitted, 365 were accepted. The total subscriptions amounted to $454,582,650 and the average price received was 101.28, which is an income yield of 4.155 per cent. Interbore common rose a point and preferred 1¼ the points.

Reading rose 1¼ points, Union Pacific 1, Wabash 1, Amalgamated ⅝ and Steel Common ⅜. Bond sales amounted to $4,000,000 par value.

Dealings in Boston & Arizona rose 11 points from yesterday's sales touching 20. This company will soon start paying dividends on its $2,000,000 par shares. Ownership of the stock is largely in Duluth.

WILLIE WINDLE WINS BY TAFT REGULARS

MILLBURY, March 22.—The "insurgents" have been beaten again. There ain't no use interferin' with President Taft, as some smart Millbury folks have found out. He is goin' to have his way.

Willie Windle is again a seelee-man of the town. Of course Willie Windle was going to be seelee-man of the town, but it had to be, if not there were some rascallions that saw it different, George did object to havin' Willie the only man to drive the hearse, so he was nominated.

It's when they came to look it over they thought it best to let Willie have the job. We heard from his aunt, Della Torrey, that he didn't like hacks because they pounded him so.

ENGLISH HIGH '06 AT YOUNG'S APRIL 5

The fourth annual reunion and dinner of the English High school class of 1906 will be attended by 125 members at Young's Hotel April 5. The reunion and dinner this year will be unique and original. A score of surprises and innovations have been planned for the banquet. The committee in charge: President, Arthur H. Healing; vice-president, George Olf; secretary-treasurer, L. H. Schell; Joseph D. Kenney, Walter Bingham, Miss Helen Ford. Eastern college will be represented. The guests of honor will be Headmaster John Tracy Casey and members of the teaching staff.

WIRELESS STUDENTS TO HOLD A MEET

Every college in the East will be represented at the intercollegiate wireless contest to be called by the undergraduates of the University of Pennsylvania for April, under the direction of President Julian S. Simpson of the club. An intercollegiate wireless association will be formed for the double purpose of intercollegiate communication via the other wires and putting up a strong front against the campaign for stamping out amateur wireless. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which boasted the first wireless club, at a special meeting to-day elected two delegates to attend—H. L. Woehling, '12, of East Orange, N. J., and J. H. Ellis, '12, of Covington, Ky.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

State Street is making inquiries as to the whereabouts of that Spring boom.

$ $ $

Spring hasn't officially yesterday, and is now on in full force and effect. If there is any boom to be engineered, the Street will be glad to know about it and will do what it can to help it along.

$ $ $

With Albany and Washington politicians at one another's throats, and with London shamed with her own financial scandals, State Street just now is not in the mood to be frolsed in the stock market, which some of the best speculative authorities believe will break out the minute the Supreme Court announces a decision, seldom or less it be known that no decision will be made until Autumn.

$ $ $

The public is interested in quite large measure, for it bought speculatively in the early part of last week when the bears were busy selling short. It is still standing on to those commitments, but is in that frame of mind which would induce it to let go on the first slight of trouble.

$ $ $

Congress is still in a state of chaos, with little hope of passing any legislation of importance at this session. But it is the adjournment of the Supreme Court without a Tobacco decision that furnishes the incentive for the advance in the market.

$ $ $

Norfolk & Western has advanced to a new high record on the buying of insiders, who persist in a belief that the Pennsylvania will arrange to lease or guarantee dividend basis between the Norfolk & Western and Chesapeake.

$ $ $

This movement in the market seems to have its foundation in an agreement among the big bankers and railroad interests to support the list as a foundation for selling numerous new issues that must be made by the railroads.

$ $ $

The railroads, of course, will advance freight rates, but they are financing themselves in advance, for there may be something of a fight when the public is asked to pay. Success of the railroad employers in getting an advance will naturally cause other labering men to insist on better pay, with the result that the high cost of living may soon be still higher.

$ $ $

Some very important railroad deals are hinted at. Official announcement was made of an offer of $25,000,000 by the Western Maryland stock to nounce the eighty-five-mile link between that road and the New York Central system. The Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio is commanding attention as a prize that either Hawley or the Seaboard Air Line should still down without delay, and that deal may require some financing.

$ $ $

Lehigh Valley, Wabash, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande and the Western Pacific would make a splendid transcontinental system, whether welded together by actual ownership or by binding traffic agreements. It will pay the investing and speculative public to keep an eye on these lines are mapped out, for the stock market reflects operations resulting in the absorption of the various companies at the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company and Guaranty Trust Company, can have no other object in view than a thorough line.

$ $ $

White Bros announce their removal from No. 84 Devonshire street to No. 9 Doane street.

They say that it cost Curb Broker Jimmie Daily $12,500 to get suspected of making the last sale on the old curb last Saturday. He bought 100 shares of Steel at 43½, but the best he could do at the opening of the curb Monday yesterday was to sell it at 43⅝ bid.

$ $ $

Competition was pretty keen to have a record of making the first sale at the new curb quarters Monday. Phil Stinger had his slip all made out on Acme Consolidated but a fuss was a question whether this or Amalgamated Sugar should be voted first honors.

$ $ $

Shipments of ore from Cobalt were light last week, they being only six shipments who sent out 701,856 pounds of ore or 350.92 tons, bringing the total shipments for the year to date up to 11,570,008 pounds or 5,785 tons.

$ $ $

Because President Vail of the American Telephone Company is attending meet of his time in New York, the Street takes this as an indication that the executive offices will sooner or later be moved to that city from Boston.

$ $ $

St. Mary's Mineral Land stockholders, who are entitled to a dividend part of a share of Franklin stock, will receive cash at the rate of 84 for one-fifth share of Franklin.

$ $ $

Assays from the Bovard Consolidated Mines show ores of $32.20 per ton and the ton. The former was $31.60 gold and $1.46 silver and the latter was all gold.

$ $ $

The Nipissing Mines Company has declared the usual monthly dividend of 2 per cent. and extra dividend of 2½ per cent., payable April 20.

$ $ $

The La Rose Consolidated Mines Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., payable April 20. The stock has been omitted.

TWO NEAR DEATH FROM "SOO" WRECK

BISMARCK, N. D., March 22.—Two persons are reported near death here today as the result of the wreck of a St. Paul, Minneapolis & Sault Ste. Marie train in which twenty-eight were injured. The railroad officials say the fatal wreck of a broken tire on one of the smoking car wheels.

A MORNING EDITION.

The Boston News Bureau proposes to expand by adding a second or morning edition. The first will appear Tuesday morning, March 29. The original purpose of the Boston News Bureau was substantially confined to the financial world of Boston. The paper goes to press at 8:15 o'clock. Because of the limited time for "making up," it is necessary to confine quotations to the most important securities only.

Beside the news contained in the after noon edition, it will have telegraphic news that may happen after 3 o'clock, and it will furnish a complete statistical record of the Boston and New York markets, as well as more news and quotations from other markets.

GAYNOR'S MEN SURPRISED AT REAL BOSTON

There are two very much confused representatives of the city of New York in Boston. They came here to study the bath system of the city, but they have been astounded by other things they have seen that they are going back and ask to be sent back again to study the whole city. The men are Aldermen Alexander D. Drescher, chairman of the board's park committee, and Charles A. O'Malley of the Comptroller's office.

Mr. Drescher poured out his heart to an American reporter to-day.

"Mr. Gaynor, the philosopher-Mayor—sent us here on a pilgrimage to study the city's bath system," he said, "on that we might introduce a similar institution into Coney Island, for we don't think it will work. What we want to do is take the whole blamed city back with us.

It's New in New York.

"Why, the first hour I was in the city I took a ride in your new tunnel. When we got to the station I started to get out and saw the whole walls of the car vanish. It seemed to open up all over. I asked a conductor what it was all about and he told me that the Boston subway trains have always been fixed that way—open in the middle and at both ends. And we are just starting the thing in New York. Think of it.

"We had a funny experience yesterday. When we got off the station I said to O'Malley, 'Say, let's walk into the town.' 'All right,' says O'Malley, 'we will.' And we walked until we came to a big piece of open country. We got into it and saw real grassy and there were lots of trees in it. Then we got to ponds and islands. Says I to O'Malley, where do you suppose we are, and O'Malley looks like the country.' Says O'Malley to me, 'let's ask a cop.' We did. 'This, gentlemen,' says the cop, 'is Boston Common. Sacred to all Bostonians. Yonder is the State House.'

Don't Have to Buy a Taxi.

"We have not been doing anything exciting in this town, but say, those taxi drivers are gents from the word go. Why, I took a trip with one of them, and when we got to the hotel I says to O'Malley, 'how much money have you?' I've got only three dollars.' Then the taxi man he says, 'sixty cents, please.' I nearly dropped from sheer surprise. Would like to borrow those taxi men, too.

"But what's the use? We are going to see these bath houses and then go back and tell Mayor Gaynor he ought to come up here and investigate the whole blamed city."

LOWER EXPORT GRAIN RATES

The transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce has secured from the Boston & Maine and the Boston & Albany railroads new rates on export grain which will enable Boston to compete with the all-water rates through Canada from the Northwest. They will go into effect May 15. They are the result of months of negotiations between the railroads and the Chamber of Commerce.

The new rates are expected to accomplish a great deal for the port of Boston. For some time the demand has almost equalled the supply of native grain. Shipments have recently turned more to the Canadian Northwest. Grain from that section could be shipped through by water to Montreal. The new rate will put Boston on an equal footing with Montreal, and with plenty of export grain will bring more steamers to this port.

BUDAPEST, March 22.—The dissolution of Parliament, the announcement of which yesterday led to riot in the chamber, was accomplished to-day. The police to-day began proceedings against the Deputies involved in yesterday's disorder. The Emperor to-day expressed sympathy with the Premier and the Agriculture Minister, who were felled and cut by books and inkpots.

WOMEN'S NIGHTCAPS ARE STYLISH AGAIN

Hush-h-h! It is quite possible you know it already, but it is a secret, just the same, and it never would do to have it talked about; but the fact is that all we girls are going back to the fashion of our grandmothers and—yes, even great-grandmothers. But the nightcap of to-day is a very different affair from the ugly ones worn in the days of long ago. They are made of beautiful affairs of laces and silks and all kinds of dainty weaves and have the decorative styles of coiffure now in fashion. Remember, 1807.

TAILORS' UNION NOW IN ITS 104TH YEAR

The second oldest labor organization in the country, Boston Journeymen Tailor's Union, to-day enters upon the 104th year of its existence, the passing of its 103d birthday being celebrated with exercises last night. President M. M. Torrance was toastmaster. The Coopers' Union of Philadelphia is the only labor organization in the country antedating the Boston body. It was formed in 1783, while the tailors of this city organized in September, 1807.

CIGAR HUMOR SHOWS IN EXPENSE LIST

Horace H. Atherton of Saugus, who was elected to the Legislature to succeed James A. Halliday, adopted a humorous method in filing his expense list, which attracted attention when the list was presented to the secretary of the State. Mr. Atherton, in mentioning cigars, presented them thus: "Three dollars paid to some druggist unknown for one hundred circular articles, supposedly made of tobacco, which if properly designated, would be called 'Atherton's el Confundido Pooros.'"

The Knock-out Blow

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but to the stomach we are utterly indifferent, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out.

Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol—pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Golden Medical Discovery." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If not promptly supplied trade elsewhere.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, cloth-bound. Address Dr. Pierce as above. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

You Cannot Think With Your Head Thrown Back

That Is Why Smoking Causes So Much Waste of Time

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

This picture is printed in Judge—to show the contrast between the thoughts of the old and the young. The father sees in his floating tobacco smoke a dream of stocks, bonds and money; the young man in his smoke dream sees faces of girls.

The picture is interesting and true enough, although very often it is probably reversed.

Not a few young men of our modern type see stocks and bonds in their dreams. And a good many of the old men in their dreams look back, you may be sure, to old days, to early faces, and wish that they had spent more of their hours with human faces and human beings, and less with dollars.

This picture is reproduced here not to talk about smoke dreams, but to talk about SMOKING.

The really interesting thing in the picture is the fact that each of the men has his head thrown back, the average smoker's position. AND WITH YOUR HEAD THROWN BACK YOU CANNOT THINK.

Make the experiment for yourself. If you want to think hard you naturally throw your forehead downward and forward, to get the blood in the front brain. When you throw your head back, with your nose in the air, you are simply star-gazing, mooning, WASTING TIME.

Excessive smoking is bad, because it means excessive MENTAL IDLENESS. When you lift up your face to blow out rings or other shapes of tobacco smoke YOU ARE NOT THINKING.

The young men who will be successful men twenty years from now have very little time to spend leaning back puffing smoke. They work or sleep—the time given to blowing tobacco smoke into the air takes away from the time needed for work or sleep.

We are not preaching against the use of tobacco. We don't believe in such preaching. Some men would have human beings give up every thing that they do to amuse themselves, and would like to see the human race made up of highly moral individuals, sitting up straight around the room, thinking of nothing except their own extreme goodness.

We say to a man, smoke if you must—it's better than using opium or some worse drug. Drink in moderation if you cannot do without it—it is better than drinking to excess.

We also say, however, to the young man who really wants to succeed that the less he smokes and the less he drinks the more apt he will be to succeed. And if he doesn't smoke and if he doesn't drink, it is a hundred to one that he WILL succeed—at least to the full extent of his power.

A man can't be dreaming and think usefully at the same time. The trouble with tobacco, with alcoholic stimulants and with all other things that men take to soothe or to cheat the nerves is this: SUCH THINGS SUBSTITUTE DREAMS FOR ACTION.

Some man will tell you that he can think best and work best when he smokes. He believes it, of course. But that is because he has got his nervous system into a condition where it will not work UNLESS HE SMOKES. The man who is addicted to cocaine will tell you that he is at his best, mentally and physically, when he has his cocaine, and he believes it. But that is because his nerves have got used to it.

Tobacco is a good enough thing, and the very mild stimulants are good enough things—since the tobacco saves men from opium and the mild stimulants save men from whiskey and gin. But their action on the mind—unless used in greatest moderation to bring about rest after a hard day's labor, or to help digestion—is absolutely harmful. It makes the user dream while another man is working. And the dreamer stays where he is or falls behind, while the other man goes ahead.

Every hour that you give to smoke you take away from thought and success.

Shall We Make a Move for True Temperance?—No. 3

The Advantages of a Beer Saloon Over the Existing Saloon

By REV. ROLAND D. SAWYER,

Pastor First Congregational Church, Ware, Mass.

The advantages of the saloon for beer and wine only over the existing saloon is quickly seen if one knows how men drink. And by men we mean the average workingman, not the men of high position and means; they do not use the saloon much. Nor do we regard the "old soaks," men who have lost their grip on life and gone down and out; they do not count in any argument. Let us see, then, how the workingman uses the saloon.

His day's work is done and, supper over, he goes out to the saloon for three reasons: First, it is a place he can go to for a social hour without washing and dressing up. Second, he will find his friends there, men interested in his walk of life. Third, the glass or two of beer is soothing to his tired muscles and exhilarating to his jaded mind. The better paid wageworkers have better homes and other attractions, but this is about the life of the average indifferently paid worker. Now, he does not go to the saloon with any intention of getting full. It sometimes happens, however, that he meets too many friends, or stays too long, drinks too many beers and he becomes semi-intoxicated. Now, if this were all, even this would not be so bad. He would go home, sleep it off, and go to work next morning, perhaps requiring a strong cup of coffee or something like that.

But the way it works with the present saloon is like this: In this reckless condition, he gets a pint or half pint of hard liquor to take home, he wakes dry in the morning, takes a drink or two from the bottle, does not go back to work. Instead, he gets on a spree, loses his job, abuses his family, degrades himself. This explains the words of workingmen's wives to me when, talking of a husband's drinking habits, they say: "I don't mind so much when he comes home beered up, if he does not bring a bottle. If he has that I know we are in for trouble and my heart sinks."

This explains the saying current in the shoe shops, "A drink of whiskey in the morning, I don't believe I'll work to-day; two drinks, I don't see how I can; three drinks, I'll be damned if I work to-day." Oh, the mischief I have seen in that bottle of hard liquor! How many times does the poor, tired and overworked wife's heart sink when she sees her husband have it. For she so well knows the beatings, brutality, crimes and misery, that so often occur in our cities and disgrace us all, are to be traced to hard-liquor drinks. Substitute the beer saloon, with such restrictions as I have pointed out, and you will take out of the man's pocket this bottle of hard liquor that does the mischief.

It is a scientific fact that men intoxicated by beer are in a different condition from those intoxicated by hard liquor. The effect of the beer is lethargic, soothing; it makes a man stupid, silly.

Hard liquor irritates him, makes him cross, crazes him, makes him the wife-beater, the home-smasher. Again, in physical effect, in beer the amount of alcohol is small and mixed with other things that have food properties. The kidneys and liver are the only organs that suffer much, and these generally only in the event of excessive drinking.

But in hard liquors the man gets his doses of alcohol in such size that it soon tears his physical make-up to pieces. And when we come to the financial end, beer is the cheap drink; it is hard liquor that most sadly depletes the pocketbook. Thus we see that in every way the substitution of the beer saloon for the existing saloon would reduce the evils of liquor drinking at least 75 per cent.

Later I shall show the argument of the beer saloon as against the argument for total prohibition.

She—I thought you told me that your friend had very little to say.

He—I did.

She—But he hasn't stopped talking since he came here, an hour ago!

He—True. But he hasn't said anything.
